Evening Chat

"The first National Meatless Day" was officially made effective in the dining cars of the railroads of the United States on last Tuesday, and up to the present writing nobody was hurt. E. V. Baugh, Superintendent of Dining Cars of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and who is also President of the American Association of Dining Car Superintendents, has been in constant session with Mr. Hoover's Committee at Washington, and thus referred to the passing of the first united action, which, though in itself might not produce a great saving, would certainly bring the matter conclusively before the public of the United States inasmuch as it affected every section simultaneously.

In speaking of the action of the railroads, Mr. Baugh said, "In the dual capacity of president of the American Association of Dining Car Superintendents and also in charge of the dining car services on a railroad which has its headquarters so close to Washington, I have naturally been expected to take the initiative for our railroad in all of Mr. Hoover's suggestions. The 'Beefless Tuesday' was a part of our original plan and all the railroads who are members of the Food Administration acted simultaneously, with the result that no beef was served on Tuesday, and as far as our railroad is concerned, no complaints have been received.

"It is interesting to note there will be no objection to the eating of sea food in as great quantities as people may wish, and as we are now entering the winter months when oysters and sea food will be plentiful, the occurrence of a beefless day every now and then will not be felt.

"For the past two months the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad placed Mr. Hoover's ideas in effect as fast as they were originated. Portions were examined carefully, not with the idea of reducing the size and keeping the prices up, but prices were reduced in very many directions. New combinations of food have been tried, to be presented to the public at very reasonable rates. The 'vegetarian dinner' was one of the originations, as well as the 'beef steak dinner' and the 'traveling men's dinner'.

"We have one of the Food Administration membership cards on every table explaining exactly the plan of operation of dining cars for the conservation of food. These membership cards are also framed in all of the dining cars. We are constantly listening to every suggestion or complaint of the public, and often secure very valuable ideas. We have a 'patrons slip' in all of our folders which the public have become acquainted with and do not hesitate to give us the full benefit of their views."

Chatting with Dr. J. H. Brownfield, Fairmont's prominent physician about his early practicing days in Marion county is very interesting and instructive. The recent meeting of the West Virginia State Medical Society prominently identified Dr. Brownfield with the early activities of that organization.

The State Medical Society was organized in Fairmont on April 10, 1887. The call of meeting was sent out by Dr. James E. Rives, of Fairmont, who became the first secretary of the state body. It was really due to the activities of Dr. Rives that the society was launched, as he was one "live wire" in medical circles in this direction at that early period. The first meeting was called and the Fairmont physicians, Drs. James E. Rives, Dr. J. K. Berkebile, Dr. J. M. Lassell and Dr. J. H. Brownfield were among the original twenty-three members. Dr. Brownfield served as president of the State body during the year of 1891. He is the oldest living member of the State society to day. The first president of the State Medical Society was Dr. W. J. Bates of Wheeling. The society then met semi-annually and at the meeting held at Wheeling in October Dr. John Frizzell, of Wheeling, was selected as the second president of the society. It is especially interesting to hear Dr. Brownfield relate his early experiences. When he first began to practice there were probably but 5,000 people in the whole county. Roads were in a miserable condition and it was necessary to travel by horseback as buggies were not used. In those days if a physician made three or four calls he had a busy day as most places were almost inaccessible too. This outdoor life Dr. Brownfield attributes his healthy condition today although he is past the eightieth mile stone.

In the early days physicians were summoned at night. For some reason or other people did not want a physician, except at night time. The farmers usually waiting until "quitting time" had been reached and then they would jump on a horse and come to the town to summon a doctor. After being the victim of many night calls Dr. Brownfield made it his business to find out why this was. He learned that the reason was that the farmers did not want their neighbors to see a physician in the neighborhood. If they did the "bushbodies" would make it their business to call and inquire who was sick. Usually this habit spread through the neighborhood and there was hardly no limit to the number of callers. In one instance Dr. Brownfield was obliged to cross a dangerous ford at night time and it was really this incident that prompted him to ask the real idea for summoning a physician at night time instead of during the day—the logical time.

In his travels in the interest of his profession Dr. Brownfield has come across much superstition. He laughs heartily as he refers to the great faith some people had in making poultices out of various things which had no more medicinal properties than a railroad track. In those pioneer days of medicine in Marion county Dr. Brownfield tells of certain men who made a study of medicine without learning it through a doctor or attending college. They posed as physicians and doctored the people in the neighborhood. Dr. Brownfield came across a chap who had a son who was very ill for a week or more and after the "family physician" had failed, he called in a full fledged medical man in the person of Dr. Brownfield. The self-made physician had used his so-called last resort dose and then he called Dr. Brownfield, who found that the young man had been suffering with typhoid fever.

Dr. Brownfield has always been prominently identified with the Masonic Fraternity. He was made a Mason in Fairmont Lodge in 1882, he and ex-Governor Fleming having been in the same class. For fifty-five years he has been a member of the fraternity and he is also affiliated with the Chapter of Royal Arch Masons and Crusade Commandery, Knights Templar of Fairmont, and has even had the experience of "holding on to the rope" at Osiris Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Wheeling.

MODERN WOODMEN'S PATRIOTIC FUND

Money to Pay Relatives of Soldier Boys Killed in Europe.

Creating extra revenue to be known as a "patriotic fund" to pay the claims of soldiers who are killed in the European war was the principal item of business transacted at the meeting of White Camp, No. 5473, Modern Woodmen of America.

The resolution, which was unanimously passed, reads as follows: "A special fund is hereby established, which shall be known, and is hereby designated as 'Patriotic Fund.' It shall be created and maintained by assessments levied upon all Beneficial members in good standing. The amount of each such assessment against Beneficial members in good standing shall be a sum which shall equal 10 cents on each $500 of benefits provided in the certificates held by such Beneficial members, and each such assessment shall be payable on or before the month for which the same is levied.

"One assessment for such fund is hereby levied for the month of September, 1917, and for each and every month thereafter until such time as the Board of Directors of this Society shall, by resolution duly passed, determine that the necessity for further assessments for such Patriotic Fund no longer exists. Out of such fund so created shall be paid the death claim of each Beneficial member whose death shall result directly or indirectly from engaging in any branch of the military or naval service of our country or Canada in the present war. Provided, however, that no such claim shall be paid from such fund unless the member for whose death claim is made shall have been at the date of his death a Beneficial member in good standing. Provided, further, that all of the provisions of the by-laws touching the levying of the regular assessments for the Benefit Fund of this Society, suspension or failure to pay same and reinstatement after Fairmont Normal will open her football season one week from today, when the team goes to Phillippi, W. Va., to meet the Broadus College eleven. Coach Bell, who in this year is in charge of the management of the team, is arranging a good schedule with several long trips.

The Normal team has been practicing each evening and will continue to practice each evening until the game next Saturday. Paul Hamilton is among the new candidates for the team who reported for practice yesterday afternoon.

Baseball Sunday at Traction Park

One of the good baseball games of the season is expected to take place at Traction Park tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock when the Elm Grove nine meets the Consolidation Coal company team. With Lee King in the outfield and several other valuable additions the Consolidation team will be well loaded for any unusual strength of their rivals.

In that this will probably be the last game of the season for the Consolidation boys, they will make every effort to win. Arrangements have been completed to announce the results of the world series at the end of each inning.
