RED CROSS BULLETIN

Boys at Camp Shelby Grateful. Julian L. Stealey, a local boy now at Camp Shelby, Miss., has written to the Secretary of the Red Cross on behalf of his comrades expressing gratitude for the sweaters with which the chapter presented them.

To the Secretary, Fairmont Chapter, American Red Cross Society, Fairmont, W. Va.: There is an old saying, "It is never too late to do good."

Nothing so helpful could have been presented to us than these sweaters, they are useful at all times. Although the climate is hot in the day time it becomes cool at night and the sweaters can be worn most of the time.

Not only do we wish to thank you ladies for this deed of kindness but we wish to thank you for the badly needed service rendered to us while at Camp Cornwell in mending our worn out clothes.

Many shirts, trousers and blouses were saved from the fire by the timely aid of the young women of the Y. M. C. A. At times you ladies may think that your work is not appreciated by us but we always have you in our mind and although we are now in thanking you we hope you see how we feel toward the great work you are doing for us.

Very truly yours, JULIAN L. STEALEY, Co. 5 Fr Bn 150th Inf., Camp Shelby, Hattiesburg, Miss.

Last Time Tonight! "The Man Without A Country"

A lavish production of Edward Everett Hale's classic of patriotism. A warning to slackers. A message to patriots. A story that appeals to every noble passion in the heart of man. Wonderfully gripping in its picture of the love a young man had for his country and its flag; the intense devotion of Barbara to duty as she goes to France, spurning the love of the man who refused to fight for the Red, White and Blue; most touching in the pretty love story that is carried throughout in an exalted, dignified manner that makes the story appeal.
