CHARMING mountain lions with a ukelele was the experience recently undergone by Jewel Carmen, the beautiful star, while on location in one of her recent productions.

With her director, Robert Thornby, and camera man, Frank Good, Miss Carmen had set out for location from Huntington Lake, which is in the heart of the Sierra Mountains. When about fifty miles north of Fresno, Cal., the machine developed engine trouble, and while Thornby and Good were fixing it, Miss Carmen unslinging her ukelele and sat down by the roadside to play and sing.

Gradually in the headlight of the machine there appeared three mountain lions, who stood fascinated by the music. Miss Carmen, unafraid, kept on playing, until the trouble in the engine was adjusted. As soon as the music stopped, the lions slunk away into the woods.

Hart is Single Star.

We always expect something strenuous out of W. S. Hart, and the picture at the Nelson today, "The Lone Avenger," is in keeping with the reputation of this star. We always like Hart best when he's a bad actor, and that is just what he is in this thrilling story. Lone handed the carries on a winning fight against overwhelming odds and brings to a pleasant ending a story that has you gasping frequently at the narrow escapes and thrilling encounters.

Underworld Story at Princess.

Catherine Calvert who played the leading part in "A Romance of the Underworld" when that drama was making its stage success, is also the star in the screen production which is at the Princess tonight. Play and picture deal with scenes and events of New York's great underworld. The story, told in six thrilling reels, has as its principal character a young and innocent girl, Doris Elliott, whose life is suddenly transplanted from the brightly secluded of a convent to the wicked, yet picturesque surroundings of the underworld. Unknowingly, she falls in with a gang of "dope" fiends and political bosses, dominated by an unscrupulous boss, Mike O'Leary. It is a terrible shock to her when she discovers that her brother, Richard, is a member of the gang.

O'Leary lures a girl friend of Doris to a Chinatown opium den and accomplishes her ruin. He then tries to force his attentions upon Doris. Her brother appears with a revolver and almost simultaneously Richard is felled with a heavy iron poker and O'Leary falls with a bullet through his body. Believing her brother has killed O'Leary, Doris determines to shield him. She takes the revolver and sits by the dead body of O'Leary. The police take her into custody. In a sensational murder trial she is defended by young lawyer-crusader, Thomas McDonald, who learned to love and prize her at the very time he was unearthing the crimes of the gang of which her brother was a member. At the moment when conviction seems certain an unexpected witness puts in an appearance and the trial comes to a startling and tragical conclusion.

Spectacular Photoplay Repeats.

A mighty achievement was that of the producer when he gave to the motion picture business "The Zeppelin's Last Raid" which is at the Dixie for the last time today. The story deals with the stirring events which lead up to the triumph of earnest loyal men and women who defy the ambitions of imperialistic rulers they once revere, and face death and disgrace for the cause of democratic liberty. The end of military rule is brought about by a secret order—"The Cross of Liberty"—recruited from the high and low, and pledged to bring a new birth of freedom to an enslaved people. The opportunities for big sensational scenes in which hundreds of people appear before the camera; for great Zeppelin raids in which huge vultures of the sky hurl death and destruction on sleeping and defenseless cities, and for battle scenes the like of which have never before been staged, are faithfully presented.

The commander of the dread monster of the skies, the L-Z 7, is finally won over to the cause of liberty by the love of a beautiful girl, and it is during the last raid of this great dirigible, when word is received by wireless that the hour of the rising of the people has sounded, and the dread airship is destroyed among the clouds by the hand of its own master, that the war lords of the starving and suffering people and themselves trampled under the feet of the triumphant Army of Freedom.

Returned to a certain extent after some of the big features that have gone before it, the wonderful progress made in the instrumentalities of war has made it possible to introduce in this picture features that will make it hard for the producer of the future to excel.

"CLOSE-UPS"

—When Mary Pickford's latest film, "ow Could You, Jean?" was being shown at the Kinema theatre Little Mary made a personal appearance in behalf of the Sandoz Commission for the invalided soldiers of France. The immense audience became so enthusiastic and displayed so much eagerness to show their appreciation to the star that she was almost mobbed by her admirers as she emerged from the theatre. It took a squad of police as well as several mounted officers to keep the crowd in order.

—The Rotary club, of Cincinnati, has gone temporary into the moving picture exhibition business. The government picture produced as a means of education on the dangers which are run by the young man who is not careful to keep clear of vice, "Fit to Fight," was shown under the auspices of the Rotarians before two large audiences at the Hotel Sinton on the evening of July 11, a medical lecture by a doctor who is a member of the organization accompanying the picture.

A Progressive Tea.

A progressive tea was an event last evening at the home of Mrs. O. J. Fleming on Jefferson street with Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. Levi B. Harr and Mrs. J. M. Altman as hostesses to the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the First M. E. church, which organization was in turn hostesses to the Isabella Thoburn Missionary society of young women of the same church. The feature of the evening was the relation of the history of the National Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the church from the time of its organization to the present day, the story of which was told by various members of the local organizations. The narrators included Mesdames F. J. Smith, Lloyd Sample, Samuel Leeper, J. D. Hecker, E. Engle, the Misses Fanny Phillips, Mae Hawkins, Katherine Troxell and Malissa Crowl. The Misses Crowl, Ruth Phillips, Mabel and Ethel Toothman sang several selections.

Next year the national missionary society will hold its Golden Jubilee in Tremont church, Boston, where the society was organized with a membership of 100 and the Progressive tea was a preparation for this event. It was also announced last evening that the local organization has a membership of 100, a goal for which it has striven for the last year. Served Dinner.

A pretty and altogether unique feature of the noon day luncheon at the Country Club yesterday when eastern bankers on a visit of inspection to the city were entertained, was the service rendered by several young matrons and young women members of the Red Cross to supply the lack of hired help. The services of these women were offered to the management for a specified sum, and this amount was greatly augmented by the "tips" which the waitresses received for the splendid service rendered. The money will all go to the Red Cross comfort kit fund. The young women, who were all attired in the Red Cross apron and cap, were Mesdames George DeBolt, Frank R. Lyon, Glenn F. Barnes, E. C. Frame, Lee Hutchison, W. H. Conaway, A. C. Polk, Miss Mary Louise Nichols and Callie Frey.

Other events at the club this week included the dinner last evening to members of the Marion County Medical Association, and the dinner this evening of the Fairmont Coal Club.
