Nelson... Her Price Princess... Runaway Romany Dixie... Baree, Son of Kazan

ESANAY has made six food conservation pictures for the United States government and is releasing them free in conjunction with its Broncho Billy pictures. The pictures were directed by Miss Eleanor Lee Wright, a noted expert in domestic science, and show the making of various foods for the table. The necessary ingredients to be used are given in the subtitles so that everyone seeing the pictures can make the table dainties. The pictures are issued to educate the public in the making of tasteful dishes in an economical manner, so as to save the material which the government especially wishes conserved. The first release was given out last week.

Virginia Pearson, Nelson Star.

The Nelson attraction today is a five-reel subject, featuring Virginia Pearson in the role of Marcia Calhoun. It is a story of woman's ambition, her weakness in the hour of temptation, and her subsequent bitterness over her own course, followed by hatred and a desire for revenge. That happiness comes to her at last is perhaps not exactly her due, but the average observer will be glad to see her get it because she is after all a woman. Then, also, the close brings out the picture of a real man who tries to right a wrong committed by his own brother.

In the opening scene Marcia is seen in New York, where she came from the South to earn a living with her voice. She is a delicately reared girl and practically without funds. Her voice is so promising that a manager offers her a contract if she will procure a year's training in Italy. At her wit's end for money to go there, and burning with the ambition to become a great singer, she yields to the advances of Philip Bradley. The latter takes her to Italy, and after three months there casts her off. Marcia struggles on and wins success. In Paris Robert Carroll falls in love with her, but on learning her story leaves her. She sets out to get revenge upon Bradley, but on returning to America learns that he is dead. In her anger she brings about the financial ruin of his brother, John Bradley. The latter in spite of what she has done, says he will devote his life to making her happy.

Hippodrome Attraction Has Arrived.

Early this morning the Baker Musical Comedy company in charge of Mr. Charles Baker himself arrived at the Hippodrome, and began getting shaped up for the matinee this afternoon. The bill for the first two days of the week is entitled "The Island of Jang," a story the chief mission of which is to bring into action two funny comedians, Charles Baker and George Leslie, in character delineations, Miss Irene Langford, for two seasons with the Oborn Opera company, will be heard in vocal selections, both popular and classic. Connie Baker, a dainty soubrette, has some songs that she renders in a charming manner. The most popular of the songs used the first two days are "How Would You Like to Have a Baby Like Me?" and "Give Me All of You." Mr. Henrich, has secured the services of C. J. Prescott, of Morgantown, as pianist. Mr. Prescott who has had considerable experience, being more recently connected with the Dixie in the down river town, arrived yesterday, and is ready for the rehearsal before matinee. See you at the show this evening.

Headliner in Many Successes.

Richard Carle, star in "Furs and Frills" at the Grand Opera House Wednesday night, is not a new-comer by any manner of means. It takes but a moment's study to remember that Carle was connected with "The Isle of Champagne," "The Mayor of Tokio" and "The Coban Revue." The present production is as strong a musical comedy as either of the others named, and is fully eligible to be listed in his successes. Silvie Hein and Claude E. MacArthur are responsible for the books, lyrics and music scores, and they have done their work well, for the book is notable for its spontaneous laugh interest, the lyrics are well turned and the music is tuneful and unforgettable. The cast is thoroughly representative, and affords excellent support. Of course, no musical comedy is complete without a beauty chorus, and the Carle chorus contains only those charming in face and form. Extraneous costumes and scenic effects are fully provided for that the eye may be pleased as well as the ear.

Charlie Chaplin at the Dixie.

What more need we say? Charlie never appealed to us, but he has probably made more people laugh than any other screen comedian on the reel today, and that is sufficient. The two-reel feature he is seen in tonight is entitled "The Tramp" and we guess from the title there will be plenty to laugh at. The Vitagraph feature is just as good for the more sober minded. It is "Baree, Son of Kazan," a thrilling drama of the northwest. Nell Shipman is the headliner.

Princess Has Pretty Romance.

Marion Davies is the central character in the story "Runaway Romany." The photography and the setting of Miss Davies are the outstanding features of the film.

"CLOSE-UPS"

Luke the inflexible but tender comic of the screen and close second to Fatty Arbuckle in the race for popularity, has signed up with Paramount to do fifty "bones" per week. Not the usual kind, but the ones that bear Uncle Sam's O. K. He is the highest paid dog in the screen business.

SEEN AT THE GRAND WEDNESDAY NIGHT.
