

Motor Trucks Are Proving Great Aid to Railroads in Handling the Freight Business of the Country

N. E. A. Staff Special.

CINCINNATI, O., June 25—Railroad men here regard with gratitude the advent of the motor truck that, in other respects, has taken much of the short-haul business from the railroads.

Here the motor truck is a boon to the railroads—a saver of time and money and a reliever of freight congestion at the terminals.

The truck accomplishes this by transferring freight between terminals in the east and west sides of the city and doing in one hour what it took the switch engines to do in 36 hours.

The change from railroad to truck terminal switching was inaugurated on May 10, 1919. Until then the means of transfer was either by rail or by slow-moving horse-drawn trucks.

Official figures show the average time consumed in transferring a "trap" car of less car lot freight from the Pennsylvania to one of the other freight houses only a mile away was two days and fourteen hours and the old system. Often the actual time elapsed was eight to ten days, it was found.

Now, it takes an average of 14 minutes to get freight across there, thanks to the motor trucks!

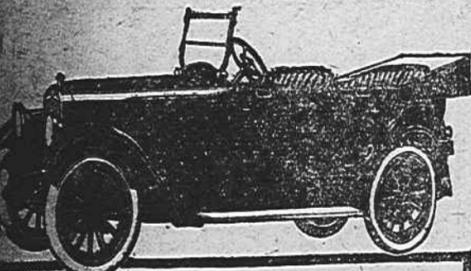

Less car lot shipments from the outlying districts of Brighton, Ivydale and Wood, which used to be gathered into a package car and hauled downtown to the big terminals by an engine for distribution, show as great a saving. It used to take 36 hours to get a car loaded with an average of nine tons through this trip; the motor truck haul for the same distance, compared on a tonnage basis, takes only 64 minutes.

This is how the wonder was accomplished: The Cincinnati Motor Terminals Co. bought two motor trucks and had a blacksmith build 12 cage bodies for them on the interchangeable plan. Now the company has 18 trucks of five-ton capacity with a large number of bodies.

The railroad freight houses have incanted decks so the trucks can be backed into them. As soon as one truck in a loaded body is swung on to it by a crane, it is secured and the truck starts away.

The dispatcher, an old railroad man, allows five minutes for this change. While the trucks are moving, bodies from terminal to terminal, bodies on the freight house decks are being loaded and unloaded. This means use of practically every minute time in actual transfer of freight.

According to J. A. Morris, terminal manager, the system has been saving the railroads and shippers

Ford Trouble Corrected.
Trouble is often experienced with over-rotation of the front cylinder of the Ford car, the oil forcing its way past the piston rings and causing excessive carbon. This is caused by the connecting rod of the front cylinder dipping too deeply into the oil. To cure this, level up the crank-case by raising and blocking up the front end of the motor. A pad under the crank-case from frame bearing will do it. There is a special girth to the crankcase. It may be necessary to use a block that will require longer spring clips. The alignment of the motor will not be affected.

The late car's six-cylinder French tractor has been brought to this country and will soon be offered for sale.
