Evening Chat

A Girl I Know. What a difference there is in young girls. I talked to a most dignified young lady of just 16 yesterday who is already a woman in her ways. She said she must go home after her work and do all the family ironing and get her father's dinner. She had a small sister to keep in charge besides. In fact she is running the home while her mother is away on a visit. Some girls might attempt this along with school duties and get by satisfactorily but school work is not so hard as office work and the little lady I know is confined to an office all day. Which means she must go home at night, see that little sister has remained where she was put, then attend to a dozen other things instead of resting or playing for a bit. She takes it all quite philosophically and rather enjoys it I believe. Not all girls are dependable.

Shall It Be a Fur? The stores are ready now with their fur coats and many women are ready to buy them—when they get the money. For $100 one can get a fair imitation seal coat, one very rich in appearance and very, very warm—that is you will be warm as far as the coat goes and it is the style just now to wear these coats about 30 or 36 inches in length. If you buy such a coat you will be expected to wear it for several years. Of course you'll always have a nice looking coat, one which can be repaired quite easily on the worn places—but on the other hand you may get terribly tired of it and won't feel like discarding it. A cloth coat with fairly good fur collar can be bought this winter for $100. Other cloth coats can be purchased for less.

Don't Cry Little Girl. I have a word to say to a little girl in the city who is making herself and her parents very unhappy because she wants clothes beyond their means. In fact I learn she shows a most unlovely temper when her father tells her he simply cannot buy her a $100 coat and a pair of shoes and a $50 dress. She also wants a 15 hat. Poor little lady! I know just how she feels and just how hard it is to buy anything ready made really extremely nice for a low price these days, and just how hard it is to adore beautiful clothes and have to go without them. But all or all the fine clothes habit is a bad one and a most extravagant one. It is also foolish to believe one must either pay the price or go without. Coats can be purchased somewhere for this child quite lovely and very satisfactory. One must shop carefully though and which for the make. You can't go down at the beginning of a season and find just what you want for a long. Shoes are ridiculously high in course and well dressed for mean to the young girl. I've even seen shoes may be purchased elsewhere, perhaps out of town through catalogue if not here, for prices to meet the average pocket book. Dresses are easy. Any mother with care and time can make a dress for her daughter just as stylish and just as nice as she can buy ready made. It she follows a good pattern exactly. She will probably have better material in it too. A good winter dress made at home should not cost over $15. There are many, many young girls who look adorable in their wearing apparel who spend very little. Taste, care in selection of clothing, cleanliness as to face and body, little face powder, no paint, with the ability to make for oneself the many small dress requisites will make of any young girl a veritable work of art.
