

BURLINGTON AND VICINITY. The Winooka river froze over, Friday night, for the first time this season. At the town meeting at St. Albans, Tuesday, it was voted to deed the land on which the court house stands to the county.

Mr. Siders' Reading. The reading by Mr. Scott-Siders, Saturday evening, filled the City Hall with the most cultivated and crowded house of the season. Every square foot of space on the floor and in the galleries was occupied with extra chairs, and all were occupied, while many, wedged into the corners, were glad to get standing room, and many even from the doors unable even to get that. The reading was repeatedly expressed with the approval of the Board in the State was owing to the personal unpopularity of the Secretary of the Board—the House adopted, by a tremendous majority, the substitute bill reported by the majority of the committee. This bill abolishes the Board of Education and provides for a State Superintendent of Education, to be elected by the joint assembly, and who is to lecture, hold institutes and perform the duties now performed by the Secretary. He is to have a salary of $12,000 a year and his traveling expenses. This is a return to the old system of twenty-five years ago, what the Senate will do with the bill, of course, remains to be seen.

The destruction in the cross-brook brooms of Vermont. An appeal for aid. JACKSON, Minn., Nov. 9. The Free Press published the accompanying letter, published in the Springfield Republican a week ago, and call particular attention to the matter. I filled in that letter to show the circumstances of the case, and to show that many families are now in a state of destitution, and have it all winter. Work is not to be had, and there is not food for half of the people in the country. It must be recognized in the more favored regions; yet in the present winter, it is feared that the situation is worse than ever. With so short an autumn and blizzards, in many cases, and with wood to be drawn, in many cases, it may be to be burned, and the people, being used to the winter, it is not to be expected that they will do more than to huddle in their homes, and to wait for the spring. It is to be expected that they will do more than to huddle in their homes, and to wait for the spring. It is to be expected that they will do more than to huddle in their homes, and to wait for the spring.

RELAND.—The ride on the derrick in the ardent had begun again. On Saturday last, Deputies Millington and Crawford took a ride on the derrick, and were seen to search the premises occupied by B. H. Woolley and H. Baldrige, and as a result of the search, a quantity of whisky, one jug, one jar, one tin, and one barrel were found. A terrible death.—On Monday, Mrs. Daniel McFarlane, of Mendon, came to Rutland for the purpose of disposing of a quantity of goods. She had her horse buggy and was accompanied by anyone. After disposing of her better she left about 10 o'clock, and was seen to enter the house of a friend in the town of Mendon. From this time her movements are enveloped in mystery, for she was not again seen. Mr. David Clark, who lives on the east side of the Mt. Morgan house, was started about half-past eight o'clock on his way to work, and on the way he saw a party of men, who were carrying a large bundle of goods, and who were carrying a large bundle of goods, and who were carrying a large bundle of goods.
