neard, and instantly it was answered by he boom of guns on all the other ships, and the same bodium of noisy whistles that had characterized the parade down t the Battery broke loose again. The copie on the hillsides jumped to their set and small flags flutter d in the hands of thousands upon thousands. All the bands on the excursion boats were in ac-tion and everything that could be used to make a noise within seeing distance was cought into play. The salutes ended mickly, and that seemed to accentuate the noisy demonstration of the whistles. But there was a limit to it all. After the salute had been fired the whistles found it too much of a task to keep up the celebration by themselves, and so, just as the New York began to swing a little toward the war, and the polles hout began toward the port, and the police boat began to clear a way for her to make a turn, the noise was stilled. But it was the still-
