Figures from Census Bulletin on Agriculture in the State of Vermont.

$108,451,427 IN PROPERTY.

Increase in Number of Farms and Value of Products—Dairy the Principal Source of Income—Big Decrease in Number of Sheep and in Production of Cereals.

The Associated Press has already furnished the readers of this paper a summary of the agricultural statistics for Vermont published by the enumerators in the last census. Bulletin No. 162, from the Bureau of the Census, contains more in detail and in substance follows:

A "farm," as defined by the 12th census, includes all the land under the management of the owner, tenant, or sharecropper, used for raising crops and pasturing live stock, with the usual tools, swamps, meadows, etc., connected therewith. It includes also the house in which the farmer resides, and all other buildings used by him in connection with his farming operations.

The farms of Vermont, June 1, 1900, numbered 33,404, and had a value of $108,451,427, of which amount $7,252,715, or 6.7 per cent, represents the value of buildings, and $101,198,712, or 93.3 per cent, the value of land and improvements other than buildings. In the same district the value of farm implements and machinery was $7,529,490, and of live stock $7,841,417. These figures, added to that of farms, give $108,451,427, the total value of farm property.

The products derived from domestic animals, poultry, and bees, including animal and animal products, amounted to $1,011,427, or .9 per cent of the total value of farm property. The value of the products of the soil, including crops, including forest products, amounted to $107,447,000, or 98.1 per cent of the total value of farm property.

The total value of farm products for 1900 was $107,447,000, or 98.1 per cent of the total value of farm property. A large part of this increase is undoubtedly due to a more detailed enumeration in the last census. The increase in the value of farm products, however, is a reflection of the increase in the value of the land and improvements, and of the increase in the number of farms.

The value of the land and improvements, as shown in the last census, was $101,198,712, or 93.3 per cent of the total value of farm property. The value of the land and improvements, as shown in the last census, was $101,198,712, or 93.3 per cent of the total value of farm property.
