The resolution proposed by Col. Albert Clarke of Boston, endorsing the proposition to erect a Lincoln Memorial parkway, was supported in a speech by Col. Brown of Montpeller and was upant mously adopted. The resolution is as fol-

Resolved. That as a regiment which was in the thickest of the fight at Gettysburg we learn with great pleasure that one of the suggestions of the com mission on a memorial to Abraham Lincoln for the national capital to the construction of a broad parkway from Washington to Gettysburg, with separate roads for carriages, automobiles and electric cars and with sections of the garden especially devoted to each State and we think that this would be more distinctive and appropriate than a tall shaft, a statue or a memorial building could be, that it would be unique among the world's patriotic memorials of great men and great events, that its expense would not equal the money of three days of the war, and that the value of its teaching would be inestimable through-

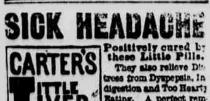

DR. CRANDALL'S ADDRESS.

Dr. John B. Crandall of Sterling, 111. gave an address in a reminiscent vein fealing largely with the battle of Gettysburg. Dr. Crandall is the only surviving member of the original staff of the 13th Vermont volunteers, who was present on the battlefield of Gettysburg, 45 years ago. He was assistant surgeon. He spoke as follows:

To the 13th Vermont Regimental association, comrades, companions and to the loyal descendants of the 13th Vermont Regimental association:

We meet again upon the loval soil of lapse of 45 years, to refresh our memories of the past.

here upon the loyal soil of Vermont we meet to recall the deeds of valor and herotsm you showed in leaving your comfortable homes, and the changes incident to a soldier's life in the field living and dead members of the 13th Verof the disloyal State of Virginia, the hot bed of southern chivalry at the time. the changes from a soft bed at home to the wet cold ground, as you know patriotism was the part you were called upon to perform in old Virginia, so that when you were called upon to repress rebel invasion in the loyal State of Pennsylvania at the great battle of Gettysburg, you showed your mettle.

Yes; there upon the soil of the loyal State of Pennsylvania you played your part well to render the field bistoric which has been visited by thousand from all nations. And when we recall the culogies of the dead we know that the part played in the dramatic scenes of those stirring times by the 13th Ver mont Volunteers will never be forgotten. Mark Antony's oration over the dead body of Julius Censar, hundreds of years ago, commemorated one of the brightest realities of Roman history, And because of the fitness and propriety of these commemorative addresses do they appeal to men of all ages recalling deeds of valor and of heroism.

The great Civil War cost the lifeblood of tens of thousands of comrades from every loyal state in the Union; and Vermont furnished her share for the sacrifice.

Yes; we have other Vermont troops ist Vermont Regiment was the first of the Vermont troops to start the fighting at Big Bethel. This was a three months regiment. And next we see the 1st Vermont Brigade at the Battle of the First Bull Run, and afterwards with McCiellan on the Peninsular campaign, fighting their way from Fortress Monroe to Yorktown via White House Landing, and then through Lee's Mills, Williamsburg and Seven-pines, until they were in camp upon the south side of the Chickshom iny, within sight of the rebel capital, And we then see them covering the retreat to Harrison's Landing on the James river.

General Lee's first move from Richmond was to throw out his main force to a place called Mendow's Bridge. and by so doing he abandoned the high ground and marched the bulk of his army on to the meadows.
