SPRING MEDICINE

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the Great Blood Purifier, is the Best.
Spring sickness comes in some degree to every man, woman and child in our climate.
It is that run-down condition of the system that results from impure, impoverished, de-vitalized blood.
It is marked by loss of appetite and that tired feeling, and in many cases by some form of eruption.
The best way to treat spring sickness is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. This old reliable family medicine purifies, enriches and revitalizes the blood. It is an all-the-year-round alternative and tonic, and is absolutely the best spring medicine.
Get your blood in good condition at once. Hood's may be dangerous. Ask your druggist for Hood's Sarsaparilla, and insist on having it, for nothing else can take its place. (LADY)

A general alarm from box 55 at the corner of Pearl and Champlain streets at 11:21 o'clock Friday morning was for a fire in the house owned by Dr. W. B. Lund on the southeast corner of Monroe and Champlain streets. The fire, caused by an explosion of a kerosene oil stove in the kitchen in the southeast corner of the building. The blaze spread over the kitchen rapidly and the fire had gained much headway by the time the apparatus arrived. Two tanks of chemical and three streams of water were used in fighting the fire for a half hour before it was extinguished. The furniture in the house was badly damaged, although it was saved to some extent by the use of rubber blankets which were spread over it as soon as possible. The damage to the building itself will also amount to quite a sum as the kitchen and shed were practically destroyed.

AT RECRUITING CAMP.
Social Service Tent Provides Entertainment for Men.
The State committee of the Y. M. C. A. are conducting a social service tent at the recruiting camp at Camp Governor Gates, and are doing good work toward providing entertainment for the men during their leisure hours. The tent is fitted up with chairs and tables and free stations are provided so that the men have a place to write their letters. Newspapers and magazines are at the disposal of the men, as is a piano, a violin and chess and checker games. A map of the Mexican border has been placed in the tent, so that the men can get an idea of the country to which they are going. It is estimated by the secretary in charge, Harry H. Brown, that about 10,000 men from the tent daily. Colonel Minnis of this city had planned to entertain the men last evening, but will be unable to do so until tomorrow night. There was a violin concert last evening, however, records being very kindly furnished by Major Batchelder.
Tuesday evening Major Batchelder gave the men a talk at 7:30 P. M. A. tent. He announced that Major Frank Tompkins, who was stationed at the border during the Villa raid, and who was detailed to go into Mexico after Villa, had been sent here at his own request to instruct and train the cavalry regiment until they are able to leave for the border. Major Tompkins is just out of the hospital, having been wounded in the knee and in the chest during his search for the Mexican bandit. He was offered sick leave by the government, but asked for this duty.
Recruits are coming in very slowly, and Major Batchelder said that it would probably be fall before the cavalry would be able to leave for the border. He and a recruiting officer are planning to visit the cities and towns of the State, and urge them to organize troops of cavalry, as they have done in the case of the infantry. The troops will then assemble at the recruiting camp, and be drilled by Major Tompkins. Major Batchelder has about 70 horses to pick from when they are needed, so there will be no shortage in this respect. When the cavalry does leave Major Tompkins will go as colonel in command, and when this time comes, Major Batchelder says that the regiment will be the finest in the country.
The infantry recruits, numbering around 10, have been ordered to prepare to leave at a moment's notice, and it is expected that they will join their respective companies at the front soon. They were issued new Springfield rifles, mess kits, haversacks, hats, sweaters, in fact, a complete outfit Saturday. Everyone in camp has been vaccinated and inoculated, the second dose of the latter having been taken last Saturday.
The band is recruited to full strength with the exception of one clarinet and one drum, and expects to leave for the border when the instruments, which have been ordered, arrive. This will be in a few days at the most.

Husky Vermonters First to Arrive at Eagle Pass.
Tired, Dusty and Travel-Stained, They Nevertheless Lose No Time in Getting Down to Work under a Tropical Sun.
Chaplain John M. Thomas of the 1st Vermont Infantry, now at Eagle Pass, Texas, sends the Free Press a copy of a semi-weekly issue Herald, dated Sunday, July 9, which contains an account of the arrival of the Vermont regiment, and which will be read with interest by the friends of the boys. Under a three-column heading "Vermont Regiment First to Arrive," the story reads as follows:
"The first troops of National Guards to arrive in Eagle Pass were the Vermonters. They left the Green Mountain State Tuesday afternoon and without stop anywhere along the route of more than 200 miles, made it into Eagle Pass Sunday afternoon. They were tired, dusty and travel stained, and the task of unloading and pitching of camp and making ready for the first night was not a welcome task, but they tackled the job. Heavily loaded trucks were soon dumping the equipment at the site located for the Vermonters and while streets were laid out and the assembling of company stuff was under way, the boys got their first taste of a tropical sun.
"There was a certain novelty in the game to many of them, and the fact that they had landed on the border and were 'putting in' within a few hundred yards of the land of the Montezuma added considerable spice, but acclimation was laid aside and a camp site, which had only been cleared and cleaned off, and water connections laid, demanded all of their time for there must be some hustling when a new camp is pitched. Tents must go up, pits dug, rough and unsightly places removed and such things done as would make sanitary conditions as nearly perfect as possible, for a soldier can never know when camp of this kind is struck whether it is for a week, year or the entire enlistment.
"By night everything was in such a shape that 'making it by' in fairly good style was possible. The water, delivered from the reservoir in pipes laid on top of the ground, reached camp at near the boiling point and this was the most disagreeable feature.
"To these men from a section where big trees and shady groves abound the mesquite brush was indeed a curiosity and many comments were made upon the presence of shade.
"The visitors from town were asked many questions and the Vermonters were surprised to learn that Eagle Pass, a little city of 10,000 people, 60 per cent. of which were Mexicans, had never been raided and had never had a disturbance of any kind, and that the Mexican population across the river at Piedras Negras across the foot bridge daily securing their food and transacting business as if there was no such thing as border troubles. They couldn't realize it. All the way down there was heard all kinds of war talk and they were in a frame of mind to expect any but a peaceful situation.
"Hundreds of Mexican children and women watched them unload, and a Mexican boy riding a burro into camp was made the center of attraction, a big husky Vermont taking a try at whether the 'little mule' could bear his weight. When the little animal trotted off, ears flapping and tail switching, the crowd cheered and became more curious. Somebody found a horned toad and then the snake question was uncocked, and there was some disappointment noted when they were advised that there were not many snakes anywhere near camp, and to find them they would have to go out in the cañons and in the hills.
"After supper a dust storm swept through the camp, giving them the first taste of an exceedingly disagreeable feature of all dry sections. Many of them were under the impression that, like the tide, these winds came about that time every evening, and were greatly surprised when informed that another might not come for months, while on the other hand, one was liable to come in the morning, at noon, or any old time that conditions were exactly right. They all drew a picture of themselves trying to put down a portion of beans during one of these little howlers.
"Monday the work of straightening out and getting camp in shape was continued and splendid headway was made.
"The regiment is composed of men of all professions and trades—many having many skilled machinists, most of them are in the line of shop. Among them will be found newspapermen, stenographers and employes of big manufacturing firms. To land them right out in the sun on marches and drills would be torture, and for a time they will do only two hours' drilling each day, which adds to camp duties, will soon put an edge on them. There has been no sickness yet and they are all well pleased with their camp and location."
PLANNING BUSY MONTH.
County Agent Dana to Hold Many Meetings and Demonstrations.
In May, 22 alfalfa demonstration plots were started in different parts of the county under the direction of the county agent, J. W. Dana. On nearly all of these plots a field meeting was called to explain the layout of the demonstration and the method of inoculating the seed. Now the results are beginning to show. On some of these plots, less than two months from seeding, the alfalfa now stands more than 18 inches high. As a rule the best growth has been made on rather heavy land. In many cases the value of liming shows up now. Notable among these are E. Wright Fay of Jericho and O. E. Clough of St. George.
Beginning with Tuesday, July 18, another series of meetings will be held at these plots and the remainder of the alfalfa will be put in.
A schedule of every day and hour that the county agent will be at each farm follows. Anyone desiring to see him or to note the progress of the demonstration will be welcomed at these meetings, also if anyone wishes him to call at their farm for any particular purpose, will let him know he will arrange to get around to many places as possible. The meetings:

PLEADS FOR SIMPLE SPELLER

Teach Child Words He Doesn't Know, Says Com. Hillegas.
Union Superintendents Omit Afternoon Session—General Reception Last Night—Views to Be Shown Again To-night.
Use a spelling book made up of unfamiliar but not unusual words: This was one of several pieces of advice which Dr. Milo B. Hillegas, state commissioner of education, presented to the union superintendents who attended yesterday morning's session in the Williams Science hall of the university. The subjects of spelling and arithmetic were again under discussion, and vocabularies generally and the spelling book in particular came under the fire of criticism and examination.
Dr. Hillegas told a spelling book used in a Pennsylvania town where the "first families" were "Pennsylvania Dutch," most of the population in fact. Sauerkrout was a word familiar to almost every inhabitant and the smallest child could spell it; but that word and many others similarly familiar were in the old speller used as a text book. Dr. Hillegas told of another school which happened to be located next door to a theological seminary. For that reason, and no other, the children were able to spell the comparatively difficult word "theological."
The commissioner told a Free Press man that it was the rule almost everywhere to employ a speller containing words which might be merely peculiar to the particular community or section.
On the other hand it was the idea of Dr. Hillegas, not to teach children first of all long, complicated and uncommon words, but short, simple ones, words in everyday use.
The commissioner condemned the speller which contained in parallel columns words of like sound but utterly different meaning. He hinted that this method of distinguishing between words phonetically alike was very unwise.
It is his view that not enough importance is ascribed in spelling in the ordinary public school curriculum.
Even more of the first period was given up to a consideration of arithmetic than of spelling. Dr. Hillegas, in order to find out how the teacher's method of visualizing number differed from the child's, had several superintendents describe how they conceived it. Graphs of simple character, consisting mostly of straight or broken lines, were used to represent various images upon the blackboard. It came out in this way that the teacher's visual conception was more complex and elaborate than the child's.
Dr. Hillegas said the child found trouble in considering a group as a unit, if it was large, and in locating an object in the distance. For example a child would be able to count and tell you without trouble the number of conveyances in the street a block or two off, but if you asked him to classify them, and tell you how many motors or buggies or two-seaters, etc., there were, he would hesitate and might find himself at a loss to answer.
Methods of teaching arithmetic were not gone into but the recitation conveyed was that the child's way of hanging number must be understood by the teacher.
The second period of the morning session was given up to a meeting of the district superintendents' association. Contrary to expectation there was no election of officers, but the report of the committee selected to choose delegates to represent the association at the dinner of the Greater Vermont association, which took place yesterday in Montpelier, was read. The committee picked out some 15 superintendents to represent the organization, and these together with Commissioner Hillegas and R. G. Reynolds, chief clerk of the State board of education, left at about noon for Montpelier.
Among the features of the meetings to be held in a junior-senior high school conference, at which Dr. Hillegas will again speak. To-day's program will comprise two sessions again, the same as Tuesday's. Yesterday's afternoon session was omitted.
GENERAL RECEPTION.
It was too late to postpone the general reception so that it would not conflict with the Greater Vermont association doings in Montpelier, and the affair was held as planned in the Billings Library from eight o'clock on. Those at the receiving line were President Guy Potter, Benton and Mrs. Benton; Prof. J. F. Messenger, who is in charge of the summer school, and Mrs. Messenger; and Mrs. E. L. Ingalls, wife of the president of the State Teachers' association. Mr. Ingalls had made arrangements to attend the Greater Vermont association events, it is understood, and could not be present. Prof. W. B. Aspinwall, head of the State normal school at Worcester, Mass., was one of the educators from outside the State present.
About 150 colored pictures on glass, mounted in the fashion employed in museums with lights behind so as to give them the effect of being "transparencies," were on exhibition for the entertainment of the teachers and union superintendents present. Many of the townspeople and some of the professors and their wives also attended the reception. The rooms of the building were comfortably filled.
Prof. H. F. Perkins, to whom and to whose friend, E. V. Hoyt of Brooklyn and Burlington, the pictures belong, announced that the pictures will be shown at the library again to-night for the benefit of those who could not be present last night. The views included some of the most striking scenes in Colorado, especially the neighborhood of Colorado Springs, and of California, as well as Yellowstone Park, and also Mrs. Seward Webb's Italian gardens at Shelburne Falls.
