A Montana paper advertises for a "good live devil."

Indians, Chinese and women, are not included in the democratic idea of universal suffrage.

Montana is more favorably talked of in the cities of the east than all the other territories combined.

Another important thing not to be forgotten, "Delegate Maginnis will be snowed under November 7th."

The 7th day of November will be a black letter day in the existence of Mr. Maginnis. Mark the prediction.

It is said to be a cold day when the democrats get left. Don't fail to record the fact that November the 7th, will be a "freezer."

Advices from every part of the territory would indicate that the entire republican ticket will be carried as if by a whirlwind.

Poor Col. Slayback discovered, when too late, that a newspaper office was the worst place in the world to go to for satisfaction.

Some of our country exchanges display great head lines over short articles, entitled, "does farming pay?" The better way to find out is to go and try it awhile.

Mr. Maginnis is ambitious. So, too, was Caesar ambitious. Caesar fell at the feet of Pompey's statue in the senate chamber. Mr. Maginnis will fall at the feet of Marshall Botkin.

S. P. Rounds, our worthy public printer, was recently credited by one of the leading democratic senators, with having more good solid sense, than any of his predecessors.

The Sunday Herald of Washington, asks, in reference to that little matter in Ohio: "Would it have been so if Garfield had lived?" How do we know? Ask us something that is easier.

Twelve applications for divorces, were filed in one day recently, in Chicago. She will keep up her lick for being the fastest and wickedest city in the world. Paris ain't a marker for her.

Senator David Davis, after vain efforts to reduce himself to a natural size, has given up the effort, and will be married on November 7th. The same day, by the way, delegate Maginnis retires to private life.

Secretary Folger has merited the ill will of Geo. W. Curless, the silk stocking editor of Harper's Weekly. It is worthy of mention, however, to say that all successful candidates in New York, have been similarly afflicted.

"Will the coming man stand erect?" asks an exchange. Most assuredly he will unless he attempts to do it in the presence of John L. Sullivan. If he does the coming man will most likely be bent in the shape of the letter S.

Congressman Robeson of New Jersey, is having a desperate fight to get back to congress. His opponent is J. H. Nixon. While Robeson's record is not by any means spotless, yet he is a good republican, and on general principles, up goes our hat for him.

It would be the proper thing for Stephen W. Dorsey to resign as secretary of the republican national committee, pending a settlement of the star route troubles. It certainly is not just the thing to have a man filling that position who has been indicted as a thief.

The Temperance man nominated for office, in Cincinnati, by the republicans, got left by a heavy majority. This furnished a pointer to the Chicago democrats, who at once nominated the most extensive brewer in Illinois, W. C. Seipp, for the office of city treasurer. Beer, like blood, will sometimes tell.

The recent defeat of the republicans in Ohio has caused the democrats of New York and Pennsylvania to look forward to similar victory in these respective states. This is decidedly wrong, as it is unsafe to predict the defeat of any candidate, simply because his opponent starts off with a boom, especially is this the case in New York where the defeat of Folger is predicted by some of the leading papers of the country, simply because the democracy are united and start off with a boom. Those familiar with New York politics will be able to recall similar instances. The great popularity of Wadsworth in 1862, Griswold in 1868, Woodford in 1870, and Dix in 1875, was relied upon to elect them, and they started out on the road to certain success, but at the election they were all dismally defeated. On the other hand Morgan in 1859, Fenton in 1865, Dix in 1873, and Cornell in 1878 were handicapped from the start and the democrats had largely the advantage. Since 1859 there has not been a single instance where the candidate who started with the boom in the race has won. This is a most important fact to be considered when Folger's defeat in New York is predicted.

In New York, the warring republican factions are styled "half breeds" and "stalwarts."—Helena Independent. While the warring democrats are designed, kickers, strikers and repeaters.
