NEWS NOTES IN A NUTSHELL

What if the battle end and thou hast lost?
Others have lost the battle thou hast won!
Haste thee, bind thy wounds, thou count the cost!
Over the field will rise to-morrow's sun.
"Tis ever thus, Maginnis.

Hotels had a busy day, yesterday.

The Grand Central was well filled by the faithful, all last evening.

The demand for rooms, at the Inter-Ocean, yesterday, exceeded the supply.

Bridge street has caught the building boom. Three new houses have sprung into existence in the past week.

Barnaby's furnishing goods store is represented at the Inter-Ocean, by an agent, with a full stock of samples.

Myers, the cattle man, has shipped from the Shields river range twelve hundred head of cattle within the past week.

The doors and front of the new bank building were treated to a stylish coat of paint yesterday by Jones & Kendall, the house painters.

Charley Deane smiled a happy smile as he pointed, with just pride, at two pages of the hotel register, filled with arrivals yesterday.

When it comes to well lettering, Miles City has a hotel proprietor that can spread the paint as artistically as a knight of the brush.

Billy Courtenay, Graham's popular clerk, contemplates purchasing a bicycle, so that he can visit his lady love at lightning speed.

C. B. Tower's show windows on Main street loom up like a "four time" winner. Everything is arranged in a tasty style. Other business men should take this as an example.

The ladies of the Episcopal church and their friends, met pursuant to a call in the JOURNAL, and arranged to give an oyster supper and sociable, on Wednesday evening next.

The Park street fruit stand is quite a resort for young "bloods" of the city to loaf. The proprietor must surely dispose of plenty of goods in his line, to judge from the crowd who congregate there.

The officers at Fort Keogh give a picnic to-day in honor of their guests at the government saw mill. A pleasant time will doubtless be enjoyed, as the committee in charge of the affair are experts in such matters.

J. W. Watson was busily engaged yesterday in piling up a heavy stock of dry goods in the new bank building. This firm will in a short time rank among the foremost of business men of Miles City. Still there is room for enterprising men like Mr. Watson.

The wife of George N. Smith, of Smith & Hegy, Huntley, died yesterday. Mrs. Smith was a great favorite in Huntley, and her loss will be deeply felt. Mr. Smith has the sympathy of all his friends in this his great affliction. The body will be taken to Sioux City for interment.

The Neuman cattle company are late arrivals on Powder river. They came from Oregon this season with a herd of twelve thousand cattle. This is only a starter, and in a year or two Miles City will be surrounded with more cattle kings than any other town in the territory.

J. K. Whitlock, who has a ranch up Pumpkin creek, has this season raised over one hundred and fifty bushels of potatoes to the acre and he had in one hundred and eighty acres. He will hold them until they are worth five cents a pound, when he will coop up the dust with both hands.

Jim Conly, who has been presiding over the jail birds at "Irvine's hotel," left here yesterday for the celebrated Hunter's hot springs, for treatment for rheumatism. These springs are a sure shot on knocking rheumatism, and we predict that Jim will return in a few weeks as active as a sixteen year old "kid."

W. B. Andrews & Co. announce in our advertising columns to-day that they will open up their large and fine drug store to-morrow. This firm has brought a first-class stock of goods, and with the services of competent drug clerks, will endeavor to fill all orders satisfactorily. A perusal of their advertisement will reveal further information.

Sam. O'Connell and S. J. Johnson, started overland, yesterday, to "rustle" in the up country. Some of the best stimulants that could be found in Miles City, done up to suit different parties, was seen loaded with the outfit. So the ranchers on the road, are sure to get a little candidate whiskey, if nothing more.

Bud Burdett, the foreman of Scott & Hanks' Powder river stock ranch, is in the city for a supply of provisions for the winter. We learn from him that the firm branded two thousand calves this season on Powder river, and two thousand head more on the Tongue river ranch. From the above accounts this is one of the most prosperous cattle firms in the northwest.

E. P. Rowe, manager of the Bay City stock company's ranch, was in town yesterday. From him we learn that on his ranch on Tongue river he has a band of the finest sheep in Montana. The sheep were brought from Michigan and are of the finest registered grades of Cotswold and Merino. Mr. Rowe has been very fortunate in the selection of his range and we look for a fine showing in the spring.

J. H. Graham, who has been holding forth at the Grand Central for the past week, leaves to-day for Junction City. He has a contract with the government to deliver eight hundred thousand pounds of oats at Ft. Custer. They will be landed at Custer station by rail and transported by his immense "prairie schooners." Graham has now one of the largest freight outfits in the northwest, and as a mule skinner or bull whacker he is always to the front.

A car load of all kinds of heating and cooking stoves have just been received at Burleigh's mammoth store. Now is the time to call while the stock is complete. 7tf

The "Diamond R."

By notices published in this issue, the public are informed of the fact that the "Diamond R." as a Miles City institution, has ceased to exist, and that Mr. Theodore Borup has succeeded to the merchandising portion of the business of the late firm.

While we differ, politically, from the "Diamond R." and have had, and may still have, to score them on that account, we feel it a duty to make some mention of the immense benefit their business, of the past four years, has been to our growing city. During this time they have furnished employment to hundreds of men, and have disbursed, annually in our midst, more than all our other business houses combined. The days of profitable government and railroad contracting having passed, the outside business of the firm necessarily, has drawn to a close. To the backbone of the concern—Mr. A. H. Wilder, of St. Paul—the people of Miles City are largely indebted for the thriving metropolis of to-day; and while he has disposed of the actual business interests he has heretofore had with us, he still retains large property interest here, and as he has a firm and abiding faith in our future, will undoubtedly make many valuable improvements next year.

From what we know of Mr. Borup, we feel confident in saying that the new firm, will at once, take rank as one of the leading business houses. Mr. Borup's ability as a merchant, being acknowledged pre-eminent wherever he is known.

The store will be immediately stocked up, and the new stock, together with the old, will be presided over by Mr. Sam Gordon in the absence of Mr. Borup, and we bespeak for the new firm, a prosperous and pleasant future.

Charlie Evans' oyster bay on Park street is doing a splendid business, and it certainly deserves it. At this oyster bay can at all hours of night or day be secured a choice dish of oysters, cooked in every style and served without waiting a long or tedious time. Charlie Evans understands his business and should be patronized. 1-tf

THE HONORABLE MARTIN

Arrives and Addresses a Great Gathering of the Unsettled at the Cosmopolitan Opera House Last Night.

The long looked for, and much talked blow-out of the democrats, has come and gone, and law and order once more reigns supreme throughout the quiet settlement. Maj. Maginnis arrived on the west bound passenger train of the Northern Pacific, yesterday afternoon, having delivered an address at Glendive, on Wednesday evening. He was met at the depot by a delegation of his faithful followers, accompanied by the 5th Infantry band from Fort Keogh. After a quiet siege of hand shaking and exchange of pass words among the select, the entire party entered carriages, and forming into line and escorted by the band, marched down Park street in the following order:

Fifth Infantry band, Kenneth Price leader; carriages containing Maj. Maginnis, J. B. Hubbell, C. G. Cox and Chas. Savage; carriages, containing Messrs. Walker, Carland and Gerrish, followed by half dozen carriages, containing the lesser lights of the party, followed by several small boys, attracted by the excellent music of the band. The sidewalk was well crowded by solid republican voters, who looked on the proceedings as a circus procession would be observed, down a business thoroughfare, in a large city. The entire party drove to the Grand Central hotel, where quarters had been secured for Maj. Maginnis, and he at once sought the quietude of his own room, where undisturbed by the rabble, he could consult with the faithful, on the important question of the day.

INCIDENTS.

A wagon loaded with lumber, which the driver had left unhitched, becoming scared at the unusual excitement, started to run across the park. A wag who was standing near observed, "That's a democratic team going to join the procession."

William Goggin, the "Kerry Eagle," waited into the Grand Central and looked for the major to pay him his respects. The major being occupied in the Star chamber, Kerry filled in the spare time by asking the boys to the counter from which is served up the wet goods.

The Norwegian minister to the U. S. was in the sleeper that contained the lion of the day, and when the band struck up on the arrival of the train he came to the platform, raised his hat and bowed his thanks, thinking the population had gathered to do him homage. When he reads this at Billings he will discover his mistake.

THE MEETING LAST EVENING.

Long before the time advertised for the meeting to take place, the cosmopolitan theatre was crowded to its utmost capacity. The speakers arrived promptly at 8 o'clock, escorted from the hotel by the band. A few minutes past 8 o'clock John X. Davidson was chosen chairman and stepping to the front introduced in a few appropriate remarks the Hon. Martin Maginnis, the speaker of the evening. The gentleman stepped to the front and said: I have been confronted by accusations touching my fair name and came here to-night in a palace car to meet my friends in a county where the gallant Custer and comrades laid down their lives. I am glad to come here, for I see by the papers, I have been abused by Botkin, Sanders & Co., who have assailed me right and left, and if one-half they say is true, it's a wonder I haven't landed in the penitentiary long ere this. I am charged with being a rebel, but my Minnesota friends know I am a democrat that went into the late war and helped put down the rebellion, and did not get any of the fat offices made possible by the northern victory. The major waxed eloquent and at times got in some telling jokes that brought down the house. His frequent quoting of scripture surprised many, who thought a democrat never read such literature. He said he had been a democrat at times when the party was in such a minority that success was impossible, and yet he remained true to his colors possessing the moral courage to back up his sentiments with his vote. He paid a tribute to Col. Cox, who he said would do honor to the county if elected. Said Col. Sanders wasn't here fifteen minutes when he itched for congress and has been itching ever since. The most eloquent part of Mr. Maginnis' speech was his deserved tribute to the memory of Thomas Francis Meagher, poet, author, soldier and statesman, and who met his untimely death while acting as governor of the territory. Referring to the promise, not to run for office again, he said: I am in the hands of my friends, they weighed the matter carefully and decided that I should take the flag once more, and become their leader. I am making the fight without the aid of railroads or other moneyed corporations, Northern Pacific and Diamond R. included. I was the only man in congress to say a kind word for the Northern Pacific when the leading congressman of the country attacked it on the floors of congress, having all the time the interest of Montana in view. He denounced Gen. Hazen and everybody else that were against the building of the N. P. He admitted the republican party had good and able leaders, who are honest and capable men, who stand out in base relief, the peers of any man. In speaking of the editor of the Helena Herald, a voice in the audience said, "he's a good man," yes, replied the speaker, "he may be a good man, but you'll find the picture of one bald head, in the next book of liars." He paid his respects to the editor of the JOURNAL, and proceeded to portray the democrats as models of virtue and innocence, denying that he had a farm in Red Wing, on which he raised telegraph poles, on contract with the government. He spoke of the surveys made, and charges the original lines and monuments have been obliterated, and the $30,000 appropriated for that purpose in Custer county, might just as well have been thrown into the Yellowstone river. He paid a tribute to Samuel Houser and Broadwater, and said he was proud of their friendship, and hoped he might never do anything to forfeit it. Referring to the charge against the army officers, he defended the military dignitaries, by asking if anyone in the audience believed the American army was officered by thieves and scoundrels. Denouncing the spoils system, said the late national tragedy, which robbed us of a Garfield, arose from it and drew his remarks to a close by eulogizing the hardy pioneers who came to this country in the days when men would lay down to sleep with the trusty rifle for a pillow and every inch of ground was reserved for hunting purposes by the treacherous red devils. The band here struck up "Marching through Georgia," after which Col. Cox delivered a lengthy address, reviewing the questions of the day, and holding his hearers to the closest attention. The colonel is a good speaker and at the close of his address defended his record from the lying stories started by some person, the color of whose hair the colonel is anxious to inspect. The address was ably delivered and deserving of a better cause than democracy. At the close of the speech the meeting was on motion declared adjourned.
