

On His Muscles.

A man considerably under the influence of liquor strayed into the office of the Inter-Ocean last night. He said he was the champion light-weight fighter of Montana, and was spolling for some one to "tread on the tail of his coat." He fell up against Jim, the good natured porter, who accomodated him. He simply threw him over his shoulder and landed him in the ash box in the back yard, where he slept off his debauch and struck out this morning in the direction of Billings.

"Waterwagon Jack" is at a loss to know why he should be arrested simply because some lunatic shoots at him. The officer would have displayed better judgment in taking in the shootist, and making an example of him.
