Thanksgiving Proclamation

In conformity with custom, the annual observance of which is justly held in honor by this people, I Chester A. Arthur, president of the United States do hereby set apart Thursday, the 30th day of November next, as a day of public thanksgiving. The blessings demanding our gratitude are numerous and varied. For the peace and unity which subsist between this republic and all the nations of the world; for freedom from internal discord and violence; for the increasing friendship between the different sections of land; for liberty, justice and constitutional government; for the devotion of the people to our free institutions, and their cheerful obedience to mild laws; for the constantly increasing strength of the republic, while extending its privileges to fellow men who come to us; for improved means of internal communication; and increased facilities of intercourse with other nations; for the general prevailing health of the year; for the prosperity of all our industries; the liberal return for the abundant harvests of the husbandmen; for the preservation of the national faith and credit; for wise and generous provisions to effect intellectual and moral education of our youth; for the influence upon of a restraining and transforming of religion, and for the joys of home for these and for many other blessings we should give thanks. Therefore, I do recommend the day above designated be observed through the country as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer and that people cease from their daily labor, and meeting in accordance with their several forms of worship, draw near to the throne of Almighty God, offering to Him praise and and gratitude for the manifold good which He has vouchsafed to us, and praying that His blessings and mercies may continue; and I do further recommend the day thus appointed may be made a special occasion for deeds of kindness and charity to the suffering and needy, so that all who dwell within the land may rejoice and be glad in this season of national thanksgiving. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington this 25th day of October, in the year of our lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and seventh.

[L. S.] CHESTER A. ARTHUR, By the President, FREDERICK T. FRELINGHUYSEN, Secretary of State

The mystery over the sudden departure of E. V. Andrews from Marshfield, Ohio, could doubtless be explained by taking a new census of the female population of that city. In all probability one would be found missing.

A man in Worthington, Minn., yesterday tried to talk a farmer's wife into loaning him some chains. Now he has no use for them. He raised a fight with the woman and a convenient farm hand gave him the contents of a loaded shotgun.

William H. Cunningham is deserving of all the pastry honors for inventing a novel method of exit from this mundane sphere. He jumped into a furnace of molten iron, doubtless thinking it a refrigerator, in comparison to the place he would eventually get to.

Scarcely a day passes but what the papers are called upon to chronicle deaths from violence. Railroad accidents are becoming so alarmingly frequent that it's an even question as to over which route the most souls travel into eternity. The bullet or the car wheel.

The fare from St. Paul to Chicago is only one dollar, with a possibility of ice cream and cake being thrown to passengers before the end of the week. In the meantime St. Paul merchants are the direct sufferers, as the people of that city now go down to Chicago to spend their money.

Another candidate for the dissecting table. This time it's an English crank, who imagines his special mission in this life is to perforate some great man. He sent a letter yesterday to the Hon. W. E. Gladstone, threatening to kill him, just for the sport of the thing. Mr. Gladstone failing to see where the fun came in, had him caged.

Tim Coleman, who killed Hicken in Lead City, Black Hills, Saturday, is well known in Miles City by all old Hills people located here. Coleman's right name is Dougherty and it was a well authenticated report in Deadwood that he once before killed a man by striking with his fist, and fled to that country to escape the penalty of the law and changed his name to add him in keeping out of the clutches of justice. His son Dan Dougherty, is running Ed Wardee's old saloon in Deadwood now. "Old Tim", was a hard hitter, and had a reputation of being a hard man, when angered.

The nineteenth century has produced some thoroughbred liars, but the one deserving of having his name first on the list was in Miles City last Sunday with a mile and a quarter story of a place in the Big Horn mountains where gold was shoveled out in car load lots. He left town before sunrise on Monday, to return to his work and section house grub on the Yellowstone division of the Northern Pacific railroad.
