GROUNDING AND SOUNDINGS

Savage & Co's drug store windows are being remodeled by carpenters.

Carlotta Pearl's benefit to-night at the Cosmopolitan promises to be well attended by theatre-goers of the city.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church are canvassing the city for funds. The proceeds to go towards a Christmas tree.

A number of our merchants are fixing up their stores in Christmas shape. So far, the Basinski Bros have the finest display and assortment of children's toys, &c.

Mrs. McCanna, a very estimable lady, the mother of the McCanna brothers, fell on the ice close to her residence on Wednesday, and was seriously injured. She is under the able treatment of Dr. Redd.

M. L. Williams, the confectioner, is a genius in manufacturing candies. One of his latest models is an image of a Chinaman, one of which he presented to the JOURNAL, and is now on exhibition in our sanctum.

Merchants and others, say that business is improving, now that cold weather has set in. Should the present cold weather continue, it will not be long before the Yellowstone is frozen over, so teams can cross, and then business will be brisk.

Card of Thanks.

We herewith tender our most sincere thanks to the fireman and others who assisted in saving our warehouse and our building last night. They worked faithfully and intelligently in fighting the fire, and by their heroic efforts saved our property, and most probably the entire block.
It LEIGHTON, JORDAN & Co.

An Artistic Barber.

Jack Ford, the barber is lately doing a big business. Recently he secured some new barbers from the east, one is Jakob Everett, who was the boss barber of Minnesota for some years, and he can shave a man quicker and better than any one in town. As to hair cutting he can put a feather edge on a man's hair so artistically that it is a real pleasure to have it done.

A Yankton Cowboy.

Joe Scott, of the cattle firm of Scott & Hanks, and L. H. Brooks, came in from the ranch on Tongue river yesterday. Brooks is one of the way-down west yankees, and came to the wilds of Wyoming two years ago, to try his hand as a cowboy, in which occupation he has proved himself successful, and now handles the lariat like a man that has been at the business for years.

Officers Dramatic Club.

The JOURNAL acknowledges the receipt of an invitation from Captain Butler, of Fort Keogh, to attend a performance of the "officers' dramatic club," at Fort Keogh to night. These performances are one of the features of life on the frontier, and the officers engaged therein showed talent of no mean order. We hope they will continue to keep them up during the winter.

A Wild Operator.

Mr. H. Ames, formerly a wire manipulator at the Glendive office, is taking in Miles City by gas-light. He is paying respects to the gutters in good shape. It is all right for an operator to imbibe freely in a town like Glendive, but coming to a respectable metropolis like Miles City, he should show a little respect to his fellow men who are trying to become men of fame.

There is Money in it.

Now is the time to commence advertising Christmas goods. Much money is always spent during the holidays. Make a special low price on some article and advertise it. Then when you get your customers in your store you can easily sell them any other article they may desire. The main secret lies in getting people to look at your goods, and advertising will come nearer to bringing them there than anything else.

Nothing Like It.

George H. Scott is registered at the Grand Central from Riverside. If all reports are true, he stopped at a well-known rancher's house up Tongue river and christened it that name. How nice it is to be a fruit tree agent, in order to have a good excuse to visit the rural districts of Tongue river. Ohn the young ladies, take them to dances and have a high time in general. He disposed of an immense lot of goods in his line during the trip.

LAST NIGHT'S BLAZE.

Annie Turner's Well Known Bagnio Burned to the Ground.

At about nine o'clock last night a fire broke out in Annie Turner's house on Bridge street, corner of Eighth, by a lamp being upset by one of the children in the house. An alarm was at once given by firing revolvers, and in an incredible short time the fire truck and hook and ladders were on the ground and went into action. The fire rapidly spread from the room in which it originated, and in a few minutes the entire upper portion of the building was enveloped in flames. Fortunately, there was little wind blowing, and the fire was confined to the building in which it originated. At the time of the fire there were a number of girls in the house, preparing for the festivities of the evening, which usually consisted of a dance and wound up with a fight. The building being of logs, 25x60, with a string of shacks in the rear some forty feet more, burned fiercely and made a very hot fire, causing serious fears that the fire would spread to the adjoining buildings, but this was prevented by the effective work of the fire boys, and no property was damaged other than a small log house which adjoined it on the west, this building being torn down by the firemen to prevent the further spread of the fire. The loss, including the furniture and clothing in the house will amount to close on to $2,500.

Justice Court.

Ed. Runyen was brought up before the justice court of D. A. Robertson yesterday, for obtaining goods under false pretenses. The particulars are as follows: Charley Morris, from Buffalo, Wyoming, a few days ago gave to Ed. McGee his six-shooter for safe keeping, and Runyen went to McGee for the gun under the pretense of an order from Morris. He got the gun, and the result was he was fined the sum of twenty dollars and costs—the whole amounting to thirty-two dollars. He now boards at Sheriff Irvine's hotel.

Off His Base.

A soldier of company B. of the fifth infantry from the post, attempted to cross Tongue river about 12 o'clock Wednesday night. He, being rather full of bug juice, fell in an air hole, lost his shoes and came very near being drowned. He managed to get out and wander back to the Inter-Ocean hotel, where Dr. Linn wrapped his feet up in all the old newspapers he could find and gave him the loan of a pair of overshoes, the only pair he had, which were to be returned the next morning. Doc says he likes to accommodate any one in need, but would like to have his overshoes this cold weather.

A Demand for Montana Beef.

Although the Northern Pacific railroad long ago reached Miles, the Minneapolis market is not yet supplied with Montana beef. Our supply comes largely from Illinois and Iowa, as this state does not produce one half the cattle needed for home consumption. A quarter of a Montana ox was sent hanging up in a Hennepin avenue meat market a day or two ago, and its quality was declared to be first-class. The trouble is that Minneapolis has no facilities for handling the wild cattle of Montana. The innocent tame creatures raised in these parts can be slaughtered in our local yards without much trouble, but the wild oxen of Montana would re-monstrate in a decidedly obstreperous fashion. They are accustomed to being driven by cow boys mounted on horses and armed with long whips, and they would object to be dictated to by a man on foot. Railroads are great equalizers of markets. It may seem strange that we should get fat oxen from Chicago, but this is no uncommon thing. It is not likely however that there will be as much of this travel westward of fat meat in the future as there has been in the past. As the population of this city increases it will be found necessary to draw on the resources of Montana. The flavor of the meat is fine, and there is no reason why it should not go past our doors to feed eastern folks, while we get back from the east the tame animals they do not need. It is just possible, however, that Montana will go into the slaughtering business on a large scale and send to us in refrigerator cars its prime beef. This would be an excellent arrangement, for oxen dislike to travel by rail. It worries them and renders their flesh less valuable from a housekeeping point of view.—Minneapolis Tribune.
