THE DAILY JOURNAL

Thursday, December 21, 1882.

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Where Our Old Road Agents Came From.

Every horsethief in southern and central Dakota, and their are dozens there to one in the Black Hills region, retreats to the Wessington Hills in Beadle county. These Hills are in plain sight of the railroad track of the Northwestern road and are nothing more than high rolling prairies. It is said that that section contains innumerable gullies, ravines and crooked trails, and that it is not only difficult to hunt down an out-law in them but very difficult to find your own way out after penetrating the section to even a limited extent. There has been a gang of horse thieves and robbers infesting those hills during the past ten years. The Cold Springs stage robbers, who got away with the bullion in 1878, were from there and were on their return home when they were compelled to drop their swag and skip flying light to escape their pursuers. Several large gold bricks thus left were found by Dr. Whitefield, of Rapid City, near the Pierre road. That section is now being thickly settled, yet the robbers hold their retreat there, and every day we read in our territorial exchanges of horses having been stolen by the gang and run into the Wessington Hills.—Deadwood Pioneer.
