County Commissioners.

Yesterday's business of the board of county commissioners at the court house was devoted to road matters. The session opened at 10 o'clock. Commissioners Bryan and Bullard present. On motion it was decided to notify County Surveyor W. B. Gaw that he is directed to measure the bridge locations on Pumpkin creek to Mizpah crossing of the Deadwood road and also at the crossing of Pumpkin creek, on the Tongue river road, and report to this board at its September meeting the length and height of the bridges required at the different crossings. (Said bridges to be two feet above high water mark.) A petition having been presented to the board asking for the laying out of a public highway from Selway's ranch on Pumpkin creek in a southerly direction along the valley of said creek to the head of same. Thence in the same general direction to the divide on or near the north line of the territory of Wyoming.

Resolved—That A. H. Sanborn, Chas. Daley and J. McGurk be appointed viewers and be notified to meet at Selway's ranch on Monday, the 11th day of August, 1884, or within five days thereafter, there to meet the county surveyor and to proceed with him to view and lay out the highway aforesaid, and to report their proceedings to this board on the first day of its next regular meeting in September, and that the clerk of this board be directed to notify the aforesaid viewers of this action.

A general examination of the books and papers of office of the county clerk followed and all being found satisfactory, the board adjourned until the September meeting.

From Hathaway.

George E. Newman, who is interested with W. W. Beasley in 4,500 sheep near Hathaway drove here yesterday. He tells us that the flocks are looking first rate and their yield of wool, as previously reported is excellent. He described the way Mr. Beasley's son, a youth of 13, managed to kill the buffalo a few days ago. The boy was riding out to the shearing ground with supplies and took a Sharp's rifle along thinking he might come across a deer. When within about 300 yards of his destination he saw what seemed to be a rock on the ground but when the object which proved to be a buffalo, wagged its tail, he made a detour and getting off his pony crawled up to a log that was within a hundred yards of the game. He started to shoot but trembled so much from excitement that he deferred firing until he regained composure when he banged away. The first shot was a fatal one but the bull jumped up and pawed the ground vigorously. The boy fired three more shots two of which took effect and the young sportsman had the pleasure of seeing the animal drop. Since then the outfit has had a good supply of tender, juicy buffalo meat, the result of the boy's marksmanship.

Vigilant Work.

The horse thief round-up is progressing favorably in the Musselshell district and excellent reports have come in from the herders. A letter from Cottonwood, dated August 3rd, to the Helena Herald says: "Stuart's cow boys have returned from their first expedition with a large band of horses recaptured from the gang of thieves they were after, and they are now on their second scout. They send in word by courier that they have a gang of horse thieves corralled near the mouth of the Musselshell and need more help to take them, as they are in force. A second party start today to their assistance. The horse thieves are revenging themselves by killing cattle. Hot times are ahead for outlaws in this part of the country, as everybody interested considers himself a committee of one to clean them out. The cowboys have performed good service so far and will continue to do so to the end. Some two or three stock men are missing that went out with Stuart's men. There are fears that some mishap has befallen them, as the country they rounded-up is infested with horse thieves. The way they do down here is to start out a party and round-up the thieves the same as they would a lot of stock. By such means it is hard for the outlaws to escape if the cow boys once strike the right trail."

To the Happy Hunting Grounds.

A few really good Indians have dropped out of existence in the Musselshell country. The Helena Herald thus describes their departure. "W. A. Hedges, just in from his sheep ranch on the upper Musselshell reports a general time of horse-stealing by red and white thieves. At a short distance from one the narrator's sheep stations a party of Crows met with a party of Piegiens and the immediate consequence was a fight. There were only seven of the Piegiens to start with and three of them were left for dead, and one Crow was killed. The Crows were out in quite a large party and showed some of the ranch men a paper authorizing them to go to find some horses that the Piegiens had stolen. Yet these same Crows meeting a younger son of Mr. Hedges, returning from Oka on horseback presented a gun at him and ordered him to dismount and give up his horse. At this interesting crisis a herder of Mr. Berry's appeared accidentally on the scene and taking in the situation at a glance drew his rifle on the Indian and changed the balance of power. Can it be possible that any one in authority has given Indians permission to rove over the country stealing and murdering. These same Indians had only the day before rounded-up and killed some cattle. Within a week two Indians in broad daylight stole a horse of Moule at Becraft, but being hotly pursued abandoned their booty. These Indians are not stealing horses because they are hungry. It is outrageous that scattered settlers should be so exposed to peril and loss."

Why So Costly.

Among the reasons given by the bridge builders for the apparently high figures bid on the proposed iron structure were these; that they would have to accept in payment warrants that they could at present only realize about 80 per cent. on and that the freight via the Northern Pacific on the iron alone would amount to $4,500, on which they had been unable to get any promise of reduction from tariff. Some thought that had the county been able to issue bonds instead of warrants they could realize a much larger percentage from the bonds and consequently could make lower bids for the work.

Artesian Wells.

The introduction of artesian wells has been begun on the stock ranges of Texas. We notice the following from the Fort Worth Live Stock Journal: "Mr. John Johnson came here to superintend the sinking of artesian wells in the Franklin Land and Cattle company's pasture, out on the plains. Mr. Johnson is a man of long experience, and after viewing the field thinks there will be no difficulty in getting flowing wells, and is now in the east selecting suitable machinery for the work. The progress of this work, it is perhaps needless to say, will be watched with great interest."

From the Trail.

L. H. Brooks, of the Green Mountain Cattle Co., came in from Forsyth yesterday, where he has been attending the delivery of 3,500 head of cattle on the company's range. He brought the lot up from Texas, but started early in the season before hot weather and the cattle have kept in good condition all through. They were driven 550 mile of the way, from Ogallala up and only fourteen head were lost on the way, an exceptionally small number for such a long trip. Mr. Brooks found no trace whatever of Texas fever among these cattle and is of the opinion that lots that were taken from the southern ranges early, before hot weather set in, will show no traces of the disease.

A Texas Remedy.

Our cattle growers generally do not expect any trouble from Texas fever in this district, as the climate is not favorable to its propagation or spread. The southern papers are considerably exercised over it and call the attention of their friends to various remedies for the disease, among which we notice from the Cuero (Tex.) Star: "To a cow of 800 pounds, live weight, give three ounces of spirits of turpentine, mixed with an equal quantity of whisky. Should the bowels be constipated give two ounces of aloes. Never give any salts as it would fatally affect the kidneys. Proportionate quantities are recommended, according to the size of the animal."

On the Trail.

A party started yesterday upon what they believe to be the trail of the thieves who stole four horses from Nelsie Catlin and one from F. Jay Haynes in the Park. The remains of a camp fire were found, and thence toward the mountains the trail of a number of horses. It is reported in the Park that the notorious Windy Campbell gang, that operated in the Musselshell country last winter, has moved to the Park region since the cow boys began to make it warm for horse thieves in the Judith and Musselshell country.—Enterprise.

Burned to Death.

A shocking case of burning was discovered on the range of the Montana Sheep Co., a few miles from Billings yesterday. In one of the shacks on the range the body of Eli McFarland, superintendent of the company, was found burned to a crisp with every indication pointing to the death being accidental. Mr. McFarland was a brother-in-law of W. W. Childs, the president of the company and has many friends among the stock men.

Stole a Revolver.

A tramp who made himself at home around the brewery yesterday morning, thinking that he needed a weapon of defense, slipped around behind the counter and grabbed Bullard's six shooter. He soon afterward left the premises, and Webb, suspecting something was wrong, saw that the revolver was missing, and taking a rifle started after the thief. Mr. Bullard arrived about the same time and joined in the chase. They overtook the fellow across the track and brought him back. At first he denied the accusation of theft but finally confessed and showed where he hid the weapon. It was found and the culprit was left off on a promise to make himself scarce in short order.

He Was Not Blind.

A young man walked into the First Chance yesterday morning and exhibited a piece of paper which said, "I am deaf and dumb," then he wrote on it "How do you sell your best whisky?" Billy Green was not onto the tricks of the tramp so he wrote in answer "$1.00." "Well, let me sample it," wrote the fellow. Billy put out a glass and a bottle of '49. A liberal supply was poured and quickly quaffed by the stranger who shot out in a hurry and being near the depot managed to catch an out-pulling freight. Green is not so verdant now and has ordered a gatling gun for the next deaf and dumb man.

Among the reasons given by the bridge builders for the apparently high figures bid on the proposed iron structure were these; that they would have to accept in payment warrants that they could at present only realize about 80 per cent. on and that the freight via the Northern Pacific on the iron alone would amount to $4,500, on which they had been unable to get any promise of reduction from tariff.
