DAILY DOINGS.

Judge Joseph Miller Dies Unexpectedly at Glendive.

A Review of His Professional Skill at Home and Abroad.

Matters Political and General Occurring at Various Points.

A Legal Light Goes Out.

The sad intelligence came by wire yesterday that Judge Joseph Miller, of this place, had died at Glendive, where he was in attendance upon court. It was but a few days ago that he started from here in comparatively good health, and his sudden taking off was unlooked for by all who knew him, and none knew him but to like him, for he was one of nature's noblemen. As a lawyer, he stood pre-eminent in the trial of criminal causes in which he was decidedly successful.

When quite young, the spirit of adventure induced him to seek the alluring gold fields of the Pacific coast, and the California mining excitement of early days found him an Argonaut in its enticing midst. With zeal, industry and perseverance he delved assiduously in the placers of the Golden state being well rewarded for his meritorious labors. Ambitious, and longing to climb the fascinating ladder of professional fame, he entered a law in Yreka and commenced the study of the legal science, and, through close application to the text books, he soon became an apt student, and later a successful lawyer. Ere long his ability and integrity manifested itself to the pioneer people of Siskiyou county, and they elevated him to a judgeship in which he acceptably discharged the duties of the office.

Later on, about 1862, he went to the young and promising territory of Idaho, and locating in the practice of his profession at Idaho City, he acquired considerable property, but had the dire misfortune, on two occasions, to be burned out during the prevalence of serious conflagrations which swept over that section. In no way undaunted, however, by his misfortunes in this direction, he applied himself industriously to the practice of his profession and soon made good what the flames had so ruthlessly swept away. From Idaho he went down to Salt Lake City, and there a fair modicum of success rewarded his efforts. But he did not feel at home among the Mormons, and in 1876, he concluded to locate in the Black Hills, which then were so full of promise and attraction. The winter of that year found him at Deadwood full of business with fine prospects ahead. He soon stood foremost at the bar of that locality, and the people chose him as their first district attorney.

As a prosecuting officer there, he was decidedly successful in causing justice to be largely dealt out to the criminal classes, which, for a brief period, terrorized the community. He was a good and faithful public servant and the people regardless of party predilections passed frequent well earned and highly deserved encomiums upon him for his zeal and success in their behalf in causing law to triumph over lawlessness. But as times tamed down in the Hills, a residence there became irksome to him as it did to many others, and he determined to move northward to Montana where prospects were brighter. Arriving here in the winter of 1882, he remained briefly in Miles City, and then went to Billings. A short time spent there, and he found himself once more here, where he established himself comfortably with his family. In addition to a host of warm friends, he leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss. His eldest daughter was but recently married to Captain Smith, the detective officer of the stock association. The blow is as sad as it is unexpected to his family, and to the sincerest sorrow of a sympathetic community is extended in the hour of fearful trial and sore tribulation.

The deceased was about 56 years of age and possessed innumerable good qualities. His faults, which were few and trivial, were directed against himself rather than against the community. For those slight shortcomings the mantle of charity should fall lightly and closely around his form, enveloped, as now it is, in the cold embrace of solemn death. Warm hearted, liberal and just, Judge Miller was ever ready to perform a kindly act, and his life was well marked by numerous unostentatious deeds of charity which showed him conclusively to be a man in the broadest acceptance of that term.

Arrangements are being made for the funeral which will be largely attended from his residence here, where, like in other places in which he resided, he has hosts of sympathizing friends. All who knew him in life, pay him the merited tribute of exalted worth. Peace be to his ashes!

In our issue to-morrow, we hope to be able to lay before our readers the full details of the services which will attend the last solemn rites over the form of the deceased jurist.

Advice to Candidates.

In promulgating esoteric cogitations or articulating superficial sentimentalities and philosophical or psychological observations, beware of platitudinous ponderosity. Let your statements possess a clarified consciousness, compacted comprehensiveness, coalescent consistency and a concentrated cogency. Eschew all conglomerations of flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement and asinine affectations. In trying to impress upon the obtuse organism of your constituents, the palpable perspicuity of your aims in demanding their suffrages, it is not necessary to use jawbreakers—speak plainly and to the point. Let your extemporaneous despatchings and unpremeditated expatiations have intelligibility and veracious vivacity, without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast. Don't make a fool of yourself by using big words. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic profundity, piltaceous vacuity, ventriloquial verbosity and vapidiloquent vapidity. Shun double entendres, prurient jocosity and pestiferous profanity, obscure or apparent, or in other words, tell the people you are running for office, and that you are the best man and want their votes.

The World's Centennial.

As it is contemplated that Montana shall make a proper showing of her great national resources, this winter, at the Crescent city, it may now be stated that the main building and Horticultural Hall on the New Orleans World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition grounds are finished, the Government building is rapidly nearing completion, and the materials for the art gallery and factory and the mills building are on the ground. The main building is the largest ever built. It is 1,375 feet long and 905 feet wide. It covers thirty-three acres, or twelve acres more than the capacity of the main structure in the Philadelphia centennial. Its size will be appreciated when it is known that there could be put beneath its roof all of Madison Square, Union Square, Stuyvesant Square and the City Hall Park, New York city. Yet it was found too small to satisfy the demands of exhibitors, and its room is to be reinforced by a 850 foot annex, for factories and mills, and by a huge building, 885 feet long by 565 feet wide, for the government and separate state exhibits. The architectural designs are pleasing to the eye and the principal building material is iron, though the Horticultural Hall is very largely of glass.

The Model Editor.

He has an unerring scent for good news as a honey-bee for sweet clover, and, like the bee, can discriminate between new and old blossoms, knowing when the real news is extracted. He must have served in all the several departments of newspapering, as reporter, correspondent, leader writer, paragraphist, critic and exchange reader. The right lobe of his brain must be conciliatory and full of tact, and his left lobe aggressive. He must have taste and individuality. He must get instantly to the core of the subject like an apple-corer. His style must be terse and versatile, and ought to be unique. He must not only be industrious, but know how to incite labor. He must be a condenser and be a generalizer. He must be plausible as well as logical. He must be a walking encyclopedia, and a good fellow generally.

Cattle Men's Convention.

In November there are to be held two national conventions of cattlemen—one at Chicago on the 18th and one at St. Louis on the 17th. It seems that a quarrel has arisen between the cattle interests of the two cities. St. Louis claims that its call for a national convention has been recognized by all the leading ranch owners and breeders throughout the country, and that the Illinois board of agriculture has been induced by Chicago "kickers" to issue a call for a convention in Chicago in advance of the St. Louis meeting. The St. Louis folks, however, maintain that they will draw the crowd, and that the Chicago convention will adjourn to that city.

Territorial Tallings.

The Little Rockies' continue attractive.

A ten-ton water jacket smelter is being erected at the Maiden mines.

The recent Republican convention at Helena was composed of a fine body of men.

At White Sulphur Springs a man who was a stranger in the town, name unknown, recently suicided by opening veins in both arms.

A cabin was burned at Pioneer, Deer Lodge county, and its sole occupant, Mrs. Frank Overman, aged about 45, perished in the flames.

John Floyd, a miner in the employ of Mr. Shoemaker, at Argenta, fell down an old shaft and received injuries that may possibly prove fatal.

George Thexton, Sr., has just received returns from a shipment of 1,510 pounds of ore from the Alameda mine, to the Cotorado smelter, Butte, the net yield from which was $752—nearly $1,000 per ton.

Judge Davis, of Boulder, who some time ago had the misfortune to break a leg, and who has been a suffering patient in the Sisters' Hospital, Helena, was obliged to submit to an amputation to save his life.

Alex Jessup, who was tried in the district court, Meagher county, on an indictment for robbing J. Laney, of the Canyon House, was found guilty and sentenced to fifteen years in the territorial prison. For horse stealing he was also sentenced to ten years.

The Northern Pacific emigration department has on exhibition at its office in St. Paul, a large collection of vegetables. There are potatoes that yielded 460 bushels to the acre in western Dakota, county of Stark, fine heads of cauliflower, carrots, mangel wurtzel, squashes, citrons and corn that yielded sixty bushels to the acre ninety days after seeding.

They have been quarrelling about his next summer's clothes. She wants him to have his light suit cleaned up for 1885, and he wanted a heavier suit. "What's the use of fighting about this?" he said finally. "I may be in the cemetery next summer." "I think," she replied, "you will need your summer clothes wherever you may be."

The Northern Pacific Railway Co. has in contemplation the extension of the present Park branch from Cinnabar to the Park hotel, and another from thence into the Geyser Basin. The right of way having been secured, the branch, which has two miles already graded, will be pushed to completion next spring.

This week has been a good one for the Republican party. Its grand army of conquest has moved on with steady step and made substantial progress toward a position from which it will be absolutely master of the situation, when the 4th of November shall have come.

The Continental Live Stock company of Montana has 45,000 head of cattle on the Cheyenne, Belle Fourche and Little Missouri rivers. Diccrol & Sons have 24,000 head of beefs on the same rivers, and Dickey Bros. on their range on the Little Missouri have 18,000 head cattle.

The Northern Pacific railroad has decided to make a rate for the New Orleans Exposition of one fare for the round trip from stations on its line to St. Paul and return. The sale of tickets is to commence on December 1st, and will be good to return till June 1st.

Some one has discovered that the high-heeled shoes worn by women produce softening of the brain. It was not generally known that the brain of women who wear such shoes was located so low; but it seems plausible enough.

An enterprising saloonist has a large box of cigars partitioned so that half are in each end. Those in one end are named Blaine cigars, the other Cleveland. In this way he tests the political opinions of smokers.

The eloquent boom, like the corn boom, continues right along. Probably a great many young ladies are getting the husbands of their choice, who would never have done so had not this been leap year.

Good citizens ought to be on the alert for colourists, ballot-box stuffers and all others who may edge themselves into our midst to interfere with a righteous expression of opinion at election day.

Effort are being made to secure Montana exhibit at the World's fair to be a
