

THE YELLOWSTONE JOURNAL.

VOLUME XI. NO 113.

MILES CITY, MONTANA, FRIDAY, JANUARY 27, 1893.

PRICE FIVE CENTS

McINTIRE MERCANTILE COMPANY.

To-NIGHT the British Parliament which assembled yesterday will settle down to the business of the session.

It is expected that the "Grand Old Man" Gladstone, who was 83 years old on December 29th last, will introduce his long expected measure giving Home Rule to Ireland. Public expectation is on the qui vive, and although some of the Cabinet oppose the measure, Gladstone's personality suffices to carry everything before him.

CAPITAL CHAT.

The Tammany People said to be Very Strongly Opposed to Any Quarantine Legislation.

Interesting Cabinet Gossip The Democrats Endeavoring to Repeat the Federal Election Laws.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23, 1893.

If the cholera gets a foothold in the United States next summer by reason of inadequate quarantine laws, the Tammany members of the house, aided by a few more of the Kilgore stripe, will be responsible for it. The quarantine bill, which recently passed the senate without a division is generally admitted to be a good bill, and entirely free from even the slightest taint of partisanship. About the only criticism made of the measure was that it does not actually provide for a complete system of federal quarantine, but as it practically does the same thing it was not opposed on that account. It was supposed that the house would promptly pass the bill just as it was, in order to avoid delay and possible failure to meet the emergency that every intelligent medical man in the country knows is almost at hand, and if orders had not been received from the Tammany boss to oppose it such would probably have been the case. As it is the Tammany members and a few others held out against the bill and loaded it with amendments, none of which have improved it, the evident object being to defeat quarantine legislation. 'Tis a fearful responsibility, but what cares the Tammany crowd for that, so long as it gets its own way.

Ex-Speaker Reed was right when he recently said that when congress did not legislate it was simply because it did not wish to do so, and it is daily becoming more certain that Speaker Crisp and his associate bosses do not wish the house to legislate at this session. They have almost decided to give the democrats a chance to make themselves solid with the next administration by setting a day to vote on the bill providing for a suspension of the purchase of silver, which has been favorably reported from the committee on banking and currency. Speaker Crisp, who is the controlling spirit of the committee on rules, does not in reality favor this bill, but he has promised to give it a chance, and there is now only one thing that stands in the way of a cloture rule being reported, setting a time for voting on the bill, and that is the fear that the Stewart free-coinage bill, which was passed by the senate at its last session, may be offered as a substitute and adopted. If Mr. Crisp really thought that this bill could ever get through the senate he would probably not have promised to give it a chance to get through the house.

Senator Proctor has taken up an idea that was the pet hobby of his predecessor, Senator Edmunds, for many years, and will introduce a bill providing for the establishment of a great national university in Washington, to be under the control of the government.

The report that Judge Gresham had been or would be tendered a seat in the coming cabinet was not at all pleasing to a majority of the democrats in congress, although few of them have publicly expressed themselves. It is known that Judge Gresham made a secret visit to Washington, and that he held conferences with Mr. Carlisle and other prominent democrats known to be in the confidence of the president-elect. Senator Bruce says he knows that Gresham can be in the cabinet if he wishes to.

Democrats say that the acceptance of the treasury portfolio by Mr. Carlisle makes it certain that there will be an administration tariff bill presented to the house of the fifty-third congress, and that it is to devote his time to the preparation of that bill that Senator Carlisle's resignation will take effect on the fourth of February. If this be true, it also indicates that an extra session of congress has been determined upon, because if congress was not to meet until next December there would be no necessity for hurrying up the preparation of the bill. Republicans do not, of course, believe in one-man legislation, but if one man is to prepare a tariff bill the most of them would prefer Carlisle to any other democrat; he will make a democratic bill, and that is what republicans want to see, believing that the inevitable result will be the return of the control of the government to the republican party.

The house committee on the election of president and vice president has made a favorable report on the bill for the repeal of all federal election laws. The house will almost certainly pass this bill, but it will be a useless showing of the party cards, as there is no probability that it will even get before the senate at the present session. The attempt to pass this bill through the senate of the next congress is certain to result in one of the bitterest and most prolonged parliamentary fights of the time, as the republicans will feel justified in resorting to any honest method to defeat it.

The republican senators have in caucus agreed to disagree on the silver question, and to leave every senator to vote as he may feel disposed.

DECEMBER OF MONTANA.

South Dakota Record of This Prominent and Important Populist.

As very little is known in this section of Mr. Beecher, the Cascade member of the legislature, the following item, contained in a special to the Minneapolis Journal from Aberdeen, S. D., will be of interest:

Brown county is fast becoming prolific of great men - politicians and statesmen - and has already acquired a reputation which has become national in extent. The alliance and third party agitation developed Kyle and a half dozen other luminaries, to say nothing of the numerous school house orators and students of political economy who have a remedy for every evil under the sun and who dole on nothing so much as roasting the republican party and its leaders. They look upon John Sherman as the hiring of the devil. Blaine suffers in their judgment for his manifold political sins.

The Hon. D. W. Beecher, of Great Falls, Mont., late of Westport, this county, is the latest gentleman, perhaps, to acquire fame and standing. He was elected to the Montana legislature by the populists, and is represented to hold the key to the senatorial situation. In fact it might be stated that as goes Beecher or Biecher - it was Biecher in his discharge papers from the army - so goes the battle. Greatness has been suddenly thrust upon him, and those who know him well here declare that he undoubtedly aspires to a seat alongside Brother Kyle.

Mr. Beecher, alias Beecher, was not particularly distinguished here. He was largely as other alliance men are, he howled ecumenically incessantly and was down on railroad passes and special franchises of all sorts. He stayed two years and was more celebrated for what he said than what he accomplished or attempted to do. He was, of course, downtrodden and oppressed, and to his way of thinking, no government was cursed like ours.

The Northrup Murder Trial.

LAVINOSTOX, Jan. 24. The Northrup murder trial was resumed in the district court today. This forenoon four witnesses for the state were examined, who corroborated the testimony of the principal witnesses for the state. This afternoon the state rested and Attorney Campbell opened the case for the defense. During the afternoon four important witnesses for the defense were examined. It is expected the case will go to the jury tomorrow.

NOT FOR LOVE

Jeff Nesbitt Explains His Motive for Marrying Pinkie First.

"No, sirree, bob! Jeff Nesbitt, ye don't come a-courtin me an a-go in with Sal Truitt too. She stops or we stops. That's the word with bark on it. Hear me?"

"Who keers, Sairy Ann Hankinson? No woman dictates what I does or what I don't. Saw off if yer wants ter saw off!"

And, taking the ring she handed him as if it had been a snake, he walked to the creek bank in the moonlight and dashed it far out into the muddy waters with a fling. Not three months after ward he and Sallie Truitt repeated virtually the same scene for virtually the same reason. Again to the creek strode he, and again a ring hissed into the angry flood. Again, some three months later, on Keziah Atwood's account, another ring whirled into the yellow waves.

Then he married Pinkie Hirst. They sat by the open fireplace. He chewed. She smoked her pipe and cuffed the dogs from the warm corners.

"Jeff," she faintly quavered after a long silence, "it's a drefful time since ye kissed me!"

"Humph!"

"Jeff, ye hain't set up close t' me sence ye axed me."

"Humph!"

"Jeff, yer hain't onco called me yer little Hinky Pinky sence ye courted me."

"Humph!"

"Jeff Nesbitt, ye don't love me like ye used ter."

"Humph!"

"Jeff'son Wash'n't Nesbitt, ye hain't never loved me at all!"

"Ri-i-i-g-h-t!"

Her sallow face fell and her pipe went out, an emotion as deep as woman's heart ever exhibits among the Sunshin hills after spanking days are over.

"Jeff," she faintly asked, "did ye marry me 'cause I were party?"

"I ain't blind!"

"Jeff," still more faintly, "did ye marry me for what I bring ye?"

"I ain't entin down a big cross for smalt coons!"

"Jeff," very faintly, "did ye marry me account of Sal?"

"Nope—dern sal!"

"Er Sairy?"

"Nope—dern Sairy!"

"Er Kez?"

"Nope—likewise dern!"

A long silence. Finley relit her pipe-kicked the board, snuffed a bit of bacon to see if it had soured, gained courage and made a last sally.

"Jeff, if ye didn't marry me fer love or fer looks, or fer what I had or fer them there gals a-throwin ye over what the land did ye marry me fer?"

Slowly removing his hand, with a squirt that blackened a 3-inch square in the glowing coals, he replied:

"I married ye 'cause I was dead tired of feedin all the doggone'd mud cats in Sunshin creek on 'agement rings—that's what—ye-own to bed, ye ab!"—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

How She Won Him.

"I can't imagine why he should but be wains to marry me."

"He told me he admired you for the way you extracted a proposal from him."
