A REVOLUTION.

The Government of the Sandwich Islands is Overthrown by a Popular Uprising.

A Committee Sent to the United States With a Plea for Annexation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. Mott Smith, Hawaiian minister, received an official dispatch to the effect that the Hawaiian government had been overthrown and commissioners from the new government were on the way from San Francisco to Washington to ask that Hawaii be annexed to the United States.

The news that Queen Liliuokalani had been overthrown came to the United States government with documents that precluded any doubt as to its authenticity. An official dispatch to Secretary John W. Foster received this morning brought startling intelligence.

Secretary Foster sent news to the office of the secretary of the navy with a request for an immediate interview with Secretary Tracy. Tracy had not reached the department at the time, but Assistant Secretary Soley, recognizing the importance of the information, went at once to see Secretary Foster.

They had a consultation in reference to the naval strength of the United States in Hawaiian waters, and Soley informed Foster the only vessel there was the cruiser Boston, now at Honolulu. No other vessels, he said, were in the vicinity. Foster thought it would be well to have better naval representation at Honolulu, and Soley went back to the navy department to ascertain what vessel was available for service in this connection.

Secretary Tracy arrived soon after Soley returned, and upon hearing the news went over to see Secretary Foster. It will take at least ten days for one of our vessels to join the Boston at Honolulu. It is probable the new coast defense vessel Monterey will be sent. This vessel is completed with the exception of having the turret armor in place, and likely she will sail at once from San Francisco to support the Boston. The interior lining of iron to which the armor is riveted has been placed in her turrets, and the stores are all on board.

After an interview with Secretary Foster, Mott Smith told a reporter that he thought the new government could be maintained without display of force by the United States. He believed, he said, the people themselves would regulate matters, and that there would be no trouble. Smith had believed a revolution inevitable, but thought it would not come so soon.

In the house of representatives there was a strong feeling expressed by leading democrats against annexation. At the same time there was an equally unanimous opinion that no other nation should be permitted to step in and control the destinies of the islands. It was said by several congressmen that the course Hawaii is adopting in seeking annexation is practically the same as that taken by Texas when it became a part of the United States.

Commissioner Thurston said this evening he had great hopes this country will accept the islands. "If they do not," said he, "our mission is done, but the people in event of refusal, will surely turn to England, who will be only too glad to take us."

The Panama in America.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. In the house a resolution for the investigation of the Panama affair provides that a special committee of five be appointed to investigate and report what sums of money, if any, were expended by the Panama canal company or promoters, directly or indirectly, for the purpose of preventing opposition in this country to the plans of said company, or securing acquiescence in America thereto; and what disposition was made of such sums and generally as to the situation of affairs upon the isthmus as far as American commerce seeking transit across the same may be concerned; and also as to the contracts and relations between the Pacific Mail company and Southern Pacific company, the Transcontinental Railroad association and others, as to what contracts or other collusive arrangements were made by said companies whereby traffic by way of the isthmus is suppressed or diminished; and as to whether said steamship company, by virtue of said contracts or otherwise, has been practically subjected by or subjected to the control of said railroad companies; and whether the business which it was the design of this government to foster by sums granted to said steamship companies through mail contract or otherwise, has been thereby diverted from the isthmus to Panama Railroad company to such transcontinental companies; and as to whether such acts are detrimental to the interests of American maritime commerce and producers, manufacturers and merchants of the United States, and if such abuses are found to exist, by what means the same can or should be suppressed, and as to whether a further grant of sums to said steamship company should be withdrawn.

Opposed to Arizona.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. Senator Carey gave notice of two amendments which he intended to offer to the house bill providing for the admission of New Mexico into the union. Carey's amendment strikes out all after the enactment clause of the New Mexico bill, substitutes an omnibus bill admitting the territories of New Mexico, Utah, Arizona and Oklahoma. The state of Oklahoma is made identical with Indian Territory, but it is provided that nothing in the act shall be construed to impair the rights of persons and property now pertaining to the Indians of the territory, so long as such rights remain unextinguished by agreement between the Indians and the United States. Carey's second amendment is identical with the first, save that it omits the territory of Arizona and is in line with the action of the recent republican caucus.

GEORGE WAS BATTLED.

The Mathematical Girl from Boston Was Too Much for Him.

He entered the room hurriedly. The young woman standing by the open fire greeted him with a smile. He strode up to her in frenzied haste. She was frightened, for he had never acted so before.

The smile faded from her face and she grew pale.

"Hut!" he said between his shut teeth. "What is it, dear?" she asked tremulously.

He glanced over his shoulder furtively; he peered into the corners of the great drawing room like a hunted animal.

"Are we alone?" he whispered hoarsely.

Then it was the woman's character in that fair young girl grew to its full maturity in an instant.

All her life she had lived in Boston, yet no crucial test had ever come to her as this had done.

"No, dear, we are not," she answered simply, yet firmly.

The young man started nervously and gazed about him.

He was from Chicago and had been in many hairbreadth escapes.

"Who's here?" he questioned.

"You are," she replied.

"I know; I know," he said impatiently. "But who else?"

"I am," she whispered low.

"No one else?"

"No one."

He laughed harshly.

"Why do you mock me?" he asked.

"We are alone."

"We are not," she insisted. "Oh, George," and her voice took on a tender, pleading tone. "can't you see we are not alone?"

He looked at her bewildered.

"No, I cannot," he said.

The girl led him out into the light.

"George," she asked slowly, "are you here alone?"

"No," he replied, "you are with me."

"Am I here alone?"

"No, I am with you."

"Then, George," she exclaimed triumphantly, "how is it possible when neither of us is alone that both of us are alone? Is not the integer the same as its fractional parts? Is the sum of two pigs and two pigs four beans?" and in the swirl of this Bostonian logic George forgot why he had so hurriedly entered the room.—Detroit Free Press.

Foiled Again.

A single glance sufficed to betray the errand of the two men with stubby beards and masks who effected an entrance through the cellar window.

They were burglars.

While their bearing was not obtrusive there was that about them which betokened a lack of culture and refinement.

Despite their considerateness in removing their shoes upon entering the house it was obvious that their moral instincts had been blunted.

"Hist!"

The burglar with the dark lantern spoke convincingly, as one old in the business.

They were standing in the drawing room now.

They were enthralled with the low, sweet sound of a woman's voice.

"Oh, you can't!"

It was a gentle, flowing tone, like the murmur of a purling brook.

"—guess where I put the money, dearest. To, he, he!"

The burglar was of the ripping sort. "She's in my stocking, and I tied sixteen knots over it."

There was a sudden rush of feet, and two burglars with sad eyes and dejected glance might have been seen hurrying from the place.—Detroit Tribune.

Decided.

Queen Margherita of Italy is a happy woman, in that she is so well beloved not only by her people, but by her husband, the king. She has long been known as one of the beauties of Europe, but she has now begun to realize the flight of time, and recently said to her husband, with some wistfulness: "I am too old to wear white gowns any longer."

The king did not contradict her, but smiled and said, "Let us take a fortnight to think over the matter."

At the end of that time came a large packing case filled with white dresses of every description and of the utmost elegance. The case was addressed to the queen and, prettiest of all compliments, it contained a card bearing the words: "The king's decision."—Youth's Companion.

An Observing Brother.

Little Boy—How soon are you and Sis going to be married?

Accepted Sister—She has not named the date. I hope she does not believe in long engagements.

Little Boy—She doesn't, I know, 'cause all her engagements has been short ones.—Good News.

Some Mirth.

Her husband's business partner—There is one thing, see business partner.

She—An engagement, you mean? Why, I thought you would not be so beautiful.—London Tit-Bits.

She Was Certain.

He—Oh, I have a splendid story to tell you. I don't think I ever told it to you before.

She—Is it really a good story?

He—Indeed it is.

She (wearily)—Then you haven't told it to me before.—Life.

It Was There.

A bell boy at the Great Northern does not believe in going beyond his literal instructions. A guest rushed to the cashier's desk. He had just ten minutes in which to pay his bill, reach the depot and board his train. "Great Scott!" he exclaimed. "I've forgotten something. Here, boy, run up to my room, D-48, and see if I have left my toothbrush and sponge. Hurry! I've only five minutes now!" The boy hurried. He returned in four minutes out of breath. "Yes, sir," he panted; "you left them there."—Chicago Mail.

Tobacco Users Suffer Sometimes.

When told that tobacco hurts them; their wives never do, because shattered nerves, weak eyes, chronic catarrh and lost manhood tells the story. If your husband uses tobacco, you want him to quit, post yourself about No-to-bac the wonderful, harmless, guaranteed tobacco habit cure, by sending for our little book titled: "Don't Tobacco Spit Your Life Away," mailed free. Drug stores generally sell No-to-bac.
