PASSED TO HISTORY.

That Is the Condition of the American Protectorate in Honolulu.

Commissioner Blount Issues an Order Banning Down the American Flag And It Is Obeyed.

HONOLULU, April 12. The stars and stripes, which for two months have floated from the government building, have been hauled down and the remaining forces from the United States cruiser Boston sent aboard the ship. Nothing indicative of American authority remains in Honolulu save Minister Stevens and Commissioner Blount. The report that Commissioner Blount would order the flag down and the protectorate abolished got abroad the night of March 31, and the occurrence created among the American party a feeling of consternation. This was due to the fact, perhaps, that Blount maintained a Chinese wall about the purposes of his mission and satisfied neither side as to whether he came as an envoy to investigation or a minister to negotiate. On the afternoon of March 31 Blount had a lengthy secret conference with President Dole and the cabinet, after which he notified them of his intention to declare off the protectorate established by Minister Stevens Feb. 1. It is understood he gave as a reason that the Washington administration did not regard protection as necessary, and further, it is incompatible with any diplomatic negotiations between the two countries. The United States, however, would brook no hostile interference in Hawaiian affairs by any foreign power. Conscious of their strength, in view of the latter assurance, the provisional government, though somewhat reluctantly, acquiesced in the commissioner's decision and prepared to order out the forces to maintain peace and quiet, which had continued almost unbroken during the protectorate.

His Conclusion.
 The man from the country wanted his teeth pulled, and the dentist fixed him in the chair and began to unlimber his gas machine.
 "What's that?" asked the patient in startled tones as he half rose from the chair.
 "Gas," replied the dentist briefly.
 "That stuff that knocks a man senseless?"
 "Not so bad as that, but it renders you insensible to pain."
 "Won't it hurt me to take it?"
 "Of course not."
 "I'm afraid I won't get over it."
 "Yes, you will. Why, man, I'll guarantee that it won't kill you."
 The patient sat up and looked around the room.
 "Do you own all this?" he asked.
 "Yes, and the building it is in and a couple more up town."
 The old fellow rubbed his chin thoughtfully a moment.
 "I guess I won't take the stuff," he said. "If it don't hurt me, the guarantee don't count, and if it kills me the guarantee ain't goin to do me no good as far as I see," and he lay back in the chair and opened his mouth.—Detroit Free Press.

He Was Glad to Know.
 The ready acceptance by lawyers of fees and "retainers" from bad men, and especially from those whom the public feel to be working against their interests, is often the occasion of sarcastic remarks.
 A certain prominent lawyer was asked by an acquaintance if the report were true that he had gone into the service of a corporation which had been suspected on pretty good evidence of bribing members of a legislature.
 "Oh," said the lawyer; "I've not gone into their service. I have simply agreed not to join the other side."
 "And you have taken a fee for that?"
 "Oh, naturally they sent me an honorarium."
 "Ah, I'm glad to know it was that. I might have got the idea that it was a dishonorarium."—Youth's Companion.

Various Sources of Silk.
 Silk worms are not the sole source of the production of silk; it is also obtained from several vegetable substances, but of an inferior and less durable description. Excellent colored silk is obtained from the prepared and finer fibers of the bamboo, which is much in demand for clothing in tropical countries from its lightness and porosity. Another form of silk is obtained from the pods of the silk cotton tree, of which there are several varieties in existence, the material obtained from them being known as vegetable silk.—Brooklyn Eagle.

It All Depends.
 "How long," says a contemporary, "can one live without air?"
 It depends on the air. Most people could live a long time without some of the airs which have been popular during the last twelvemonth.—Exchange.

WE DID NOT LIE.

But the Drummer Convinced Upon Investigation Not to Invest.
 "Wanting you thinking about?" asked the land agent of the drummer, who sat by the fire in a brown study.
 "About investing some money I have in real estate?" replied the drummer.
 "How much?"
 "All I've got, about $1,000."
 "Where is the real estate?"
 "In a western town. You saw that man I've been talking to for an hour or so and who left here awhile ago?"
 "Yes."
 "Well, I met him on a train today, and he got me interested in a town out west called Hesperides. It's only about 3 years old, he says, but it has been coming up at a phenomenal rate. He had maps and stuff here this evening till you couldn't rest, and he offered me five acres within half a mile of the center of the town for $1,000."

The clerk devoted a moment to wrestling with a thought.
 "What's the population of the place?"
 "He didn't say, but he said it was 25 times greater than it was in 1890, when the first settler came in. He said, too, that the number of houses had increased 100 per cent each year for the three since the first lots were laid out."
 "That's a good showing," said the clerk, "a fine showing, but did he say how many houses there were put up the first year?"
 "The drummer looked queer."
 "No, he didn't," he replied.
 "The clerk went around behind the counter and came back with a newspaper.
 "Here's an article on real estate snaps out west," he said; "let's look for your town. Ah," he went on after a moment, "here you are: 'Hesperides, a boom town, one house put up in 1890, two in 1891, 1892 not yet in. Population in 1890, 1; in 1891, 10; in 1892, 20; estimate for 1893, 25.'"
 The clerk looked at the drummer and smiled.
 "Well," exclaimed the drummer, with a sigh of relief, "I'm glad he didn't lie about it, for I do so despise a liar."
 "What about investing your thousand?" inquired the clerk.
 The drummer gave a long, low whistle and went off to bed.—Detroit Free Press.

Before and After.

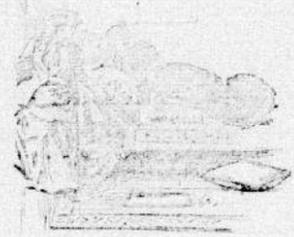

What They Did.

An officer in the treasury at Washington, who was a resident of that city at the time of the commencement of the "little dispute," witnessed the hasty return of the panic-stricken Union troops after the first battle of Bull Run. He says:
 "The whole city was in a great state of excitement, and for a few hours everything seemed completely demoralized. Each man had some awful story to tell and had no trouble in finding an audience to listen to his recital.
 Among other venacious accounts was that given by a colored teamster from a Virginia regiment, who attracted quite a crowd of eager listeners in Willard's hotel.
 "De fust ting we knowed we see de sagers comin, an I should tink dar war millions on millions. De cap'n ob de regiment singed out, 'Drap down dar! Drap down dar!' But, law, twa'n't no use! De bungshells come an took dar heads clear off!
 "Dis chile tink him dead for suah, an in de confinement Massa Gibbons' mules done got loose, wid six niggers on 'em an run smack and smooze into Massa Linkum's lines and captured ourselves!"—Youth's Companion.

Government "Deadheads."
 In some of the departments at Washington there are so many clerks that the useless ones stand in the way of those who are disposed to work. The working clerks are a splendid force of experienced and capable men, but the Title Barnacles are found everywhere.—Pittsburg Post.

It is a common thing for actors and actresses on the road to send money orders to themselves as coming places on their route lists, which is often the only care for the future many of them will take.

A Good Deal.
