CHAMPION OF SILVER

The Transmississippi Congress at Ogden Wants No Other.

Gov. W. J. McConnell, of Idaho, Declares Himself and is Elected President By a Large Majority.

OGDEN, Utah, April 25.—The Transmississippi congress re-assembled at 10 o'clock. The interest in the organization of the congress centered in the selection of a president. Gov. McConnell, of Idaho was plainly the favorite, with A. C. Fisk a close second. Both men are distinguished for oratory. McConnell as United States senator from the new state of Idaho, started that steady body by declaring that the government mortgage of $12,000,000 on the Southern Pacific railroad was changed from a first to a second mortgage through the payment of $500,000 of English money, and challenged the senate to call for dates, figures and names, a challenge which was not accepted. A. C. Fisk recently called down upon his head the denunciations of the eastern press by suggesting at the session of the Bi-Metallic league at Washington that it might soon become necessary for the western states to seek an alliance with the silver producing countries of Central and South America.

Gov. Prince, of New Mexico, introduced Gov. A. L. Thomas of Utah, who had been detained from yesterday's session by a railroad accident. Soon after he began his speech he was interrupted by the arrival of Senator Stewart of Nevada, Senator Warren of Wyoming, and Hon. T. M. Patterson of Denver. These gentlemen were received by the members with prolonged cheers amounting almost to an ovation. Gov. Thomas, in his speech, took advanced grounds on the silver question. At the close of his address resolutions were introduced by Montana on the mineral lands in the grant to the Northern Pacific, and by Secretary Brady, of the Galveston Chamber of Commerce, regarding the harbor of that city. A. C. Fisk, of Denver, introduced a series of resolutions covering every subject it was proper to take action on, which led the chairman of the Kansas delegation to state that not having heard distinctly, he would like to know if the Keely cure had been indorsed.

The committee on permanent organization reported as follows: For President, Gov. W. J. McConnell of Idaho; for secretary, W. H. Harvey, of Ogden, Utah; assistants, W. J. Easterbrook of Oregon, and O. W. Crawford, of Texas. A minority report suggested also for president the names of A. C. Fisk, of Colorado, and J. W. Bent, of Washington. A vote resulted as follows: 141 for the minority and 116 for the majority. The standing of Gov. McConnell on silver was challenged by Congressman Elect Pence, of Colorado.

Col. John P. Irish defended Gov. McConnell's standing, declaring that it was ridiculous to challenge the standing of an Idaho man, as Idaho would probably not allow an anti-silver man to live peaceably within its borders. Gov. Waite declared the congress should know where he stood on this question. McConnell, on being called out, placed himself on record as favoring the free coinage of silver in the ratio of sixteen to one in gold.

The committee on permanent organization presented the following list of vice-presidents: Arizona, Hon. W. A. Cheney; Arkansas, Hon. W. M. Fishback; Colorado, Q. E. Hicks; Idaho, A. J. Hannaford; Oklahoma, John J. Dills; New Mexico, Gov. L. B. Prince; Montana, Jas. A. Murray; Utah, C. C. Goodwin; Kansas, J. W. Ady, Texas, Geo. Alford; Nebraska, Congressman W. J. Bryan; Washington, Col. J. W. Feighan; Nevada, W. E. Sharon; North Dakota, Gov. Shortridge; California, W. Johnson; Oregon, Gen. H. B. Conson; Iowa, W. H. Taylor; Missouri, W. B. Arche; Wyoming, C. E. Bladenberg.

Considerable routine business was transacted, but nothing was done of an important character.

It was expected that a fight on the location of the convention would ensue, as San Francisco and Dallas, Texas, were bidding for the plum. It was soon evident, however, that California was in the lead and Texas retired, making the selection of San Francisco unanimous. The date was left to the executive committee. Julian Sonntag, of San Francisco, was selected as secretary, Col. W. H. Harvey having declined. Each of the trans-Mississippi states was authorized to appoint a member of the executive committee.

This evening a large and distinguished gathering greeted Col. T. M. Patterson, of the Rocky Mountain News of Denver, who spoke on the free coinage of silver, strongly advocating the white metal. Senator Stewart will speak tomorrow evening.

Guessing at it.
One of the good deacons in a certain church is also the superintendent of the Sunday school, and although he is not an artist he frequently illustrates points in the lesson by the use of the black-board. These exercises are for the special benefit of the younger portion of the school, and the superintendent has a habit of arousing the children's interest by asking questions about what he has drawn.

Having drawn the representation of a crown one Sunday, much after the stereotyped style of all such royal appendages, he said, "Now, what one of the little folks can tell me what this is?" Several raised their hands, but the superintendent's eye was caught by a little fellow on the front seat.

"Well, Jehanah, you may tell." Proud of his distinction above his fellows, the boy rose smilingly and shouted, "A pincushion!"—Boston Journal.

Awkward Things to Forget.
Your tickets when it is raining outside, crowded inside and you have sent away the cab.—Sermon's Magazine.

His Little Piece.
The thin, fleecy clouds scurried across the sky, dimming at intervals the light of the moon, whose pale rays shone upon a young man standing near the corner of Jackson and Dearborn streets.

His dress was plain, even to shabbiness. The night air was chill, and as he leaned against a lamppost, with his hands in his pockets, his hat pulled down over his eyes and his head drawn down as far as it would go inside his turned up coat collar, he looked like a man to whom hope and a square meal had long been strangers.

Suddenly he straightened up. A new impulse, born of his necessities and heralding, mayhap, the dawning of a conviction that American manhood was not a thing to be surrendered even amid injustice, misfortune and neglect, had apparently taken possession of him. A footstep was heard approaching, and as if stirred by a latent feeling of shame that the eye of a fellow being should rest upon him in his dejected and forlorn aspect he turned down his coat collar, placed his hat squarely on his head and stepped out from under the street lamp.

"Mister," he said plaintively, "would you be so kind and obliging as to help me a little I am a hard working man out of a job and I haven't had a mouthful to eat for three days and it's pretty tough luck and all I ask is a dime if you would be so kind and obliging as to assist me a little it's all I ask and when a man's down on his luck go to Halifax you darned high toned stuck up dude you hain't got a darned cent nohow?"—Chicago Tribune.

For an Evening Party.
A bright table game is called "book title illustrating." Paper and pencils are dealt out. Each participant makes a mental choice of a book title and keeps it sedulously concealed from the rest. Each then proceeds to make as telling and graphic illustration of his title as the limits of time and paper will admit of. Much elaboration is not desirable, as that consumes time and makes the movement of the game too slow. Space must be left at the top of the paper for a list of guesses.

When time is called and work ceases, each passes his sketch to his next neighbor, who after a brief study registers his guess at the title at the top of the page and turns it down on the under side, then passes it on to his next left hand neighbor, receiving in turn another sketch on his right. Each paper thus makes the round, returning finally to its original owner, who writes on it the correct title, which is then compared with the recorded guesses.—Harper's Bazar.

A Curious Change In Headgear.
"The derby hat is doomed," said Olin D. Parker of Boston to a reporter. "At any rate that's the way it looks to me. Here in St. Louis the derby appears to still hold its own, but in several of the largest eastern cities, where I spent some time, there was nothing to be seen on a man's head but soft felt hats. There is a general rush for the soft hat, with rolling brim and split top. It looks quite as desire as the derby, and it is far more desirable, as it fits the head snugly and doesn't let the wind go careening between the hat lining and the base of your brain as the stiff hat does. A curious thing about hats is this: Not many years ago the stiff hat was all the go in the east, and the soft hat was characteristic of the west. Now the conditions are reversed. Even the Kansas farmers now sport derbies, and I wouldn't be surprised to find some of them plowing with pling hats on."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

In the little old

Brown School House

on the hill-side some of us read the story of the dog who, "like a miner wide-awake, he had been and raised a stake." Crossing a bridge, he thought he saw another dog and more meat below, and went for him. We know the sad result. The moral is a good one, and a Kansas poet puts it this way:

"When a man has raised a stake,
If he labors then to make
Some poor neighbor drop his meat,
It injures his own defeat."
"No one merchant yet was made
Who could gobble all the trade,
Painfully misfortune tells
Those who reach for some one else."
"No one bulldog yet could eat
Every other bulldog's meat,
If you have a good-sized bone,
Let the other dog alone."

While the other fellows are growling for our bone, we take pleasure in offering you some Great Values in Gent's Half Hose for 25c. We also sell Groceries at a small advance on the Cost.
