TARIFF AND FINANCE.

Programme Mapped out for the Extra Session of Congress in September.

The Advocates of Silver Threaten to Give Trouble Unless Their Side is Listened To.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The extra session of congress to meet early in September, is the talk in administration circles. By that time Senator Mills and Statistician Atkinson will be ready with the tariff bill on which they are now at work. The plan, as it is understood, is to have the committee on ways and means appointed by Speaker Crisp, whose election to the speakership is a part of the scheme; also the committee on appropriations and the committee on coinage, and possibly one or two other committees. This done, there will be a recess, after the necessary conferences on the question of the offices and whatever else may be useful to produce concert of action; and then everything will be done to concentrate public opinion preparatory to the reassembling of congress about the middle of November. Then a dead set will be made for the repeal of the Sherman silver law; after that is disposed of, the committee on ways and means will be ready to report the tariff law, the committee on appropriations being also ready with its economical bills for harbors and rivers, public buildings, pensions, and other leading items which have usually embraced by far the largest amounts making up the grand total of expenditures. Having ratified the administration scheme, and passed such other laws as will complete the plan of finance for making the two ends meet, congress will be expected to adjourn. Of course some little time will be allowed for general legislation which the president will be ready to sanction or veto, as it shall accord with his ideas of putting as much money into the treasury, and taking as little out as possible.

All this presupposes the obedience of congress to the president's will. There is a rumor that of late President Cleveland has had something resembling misgiving about bringing on earlier than the regular meeting of congress the great battle, which must end in the success or failure of his administration. Though he might not be much disposed to halt, certain supporters of such power and importance as seem to entitle them to have a word to say, are reported as advising to wait for the regular session. But these, having mildly protested, which is about all there is left to them, are expected to fall in behind the president and help to put through the programme in whatever way he shall command. With everything cut and dried in advance, and with the greater part of the offices held in reserve with which to convince senators and representatives how they should act, President Cleveland does not permit himself to seriously question how it will come out. It is believed Secretary Carlisle is not so confident. Were the plan of action arranged more in harmony with his trained views, and less in conflict with his experience in congress, less in antagonism with the knowledge of public sentiment which he has gained as a representative and senator, he would, it is said, share to a greater degree than he does the hopefulness of the president. Yet he will, after all, stand up as courageously as possible under the circumstances, in support of his chief.

Those who are opposed to the repeal of the Sherman law declare they will never yield. They also expect to be strong enough to prevent the repeal, unless as much as the Bland law is given in lieu, at the very least. It is asserted that the arguments and agencies that the president will employ to repeal the Sherman bill will be turned against him. Cleveland having placed all his eggs in one basket, they say they will smash them by concentrating the opposition about his policy in general appropriations; his new tariff bill; his retrenchment of harbor and river improvements and public buildings, and his policy on pensions. His course in other respects will be sure to arouse democrats who have stood before the country as advocates of a tariff of revenue only, and for free trade otherwise. Yet many statesmen have been induced to abandon their ground and to go in for protection, though not for "protection's sake," while other democrats, not less conspicuous, have, it is said, declared that they are willing to let Cleveland have his way without as much as a single objection. "Let him try it on the tariff, and on finance in general and particular," said a democrat not now in congress yet in office, and who for a lifetime has held to other views and another course of policy. "If the country is willing to have the experiment proceed it will manifest that feeling. If it is not, it will find ways to speak out."

The President is Tired of It.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The following has been issued by the president for publication: "The rules heretofore promulgating interviews with the president have wholly failed in their operation. The time which, under these rules, was set apart for the reception of senators and representatives, has been almost entirely spent in listening to applications for office, which have been bewildering in volume, perplexing and exhausting in iteration, and impossible of remembrance. Due regard for public duty, which must be neglected if the present conditions continue and the observance of the limitations placed upon human endurance, oblige me to decline from now and after this date all personal interviews with those seeking appointments to office, except as I, on my motion, may especially invite them. The same considerations make it possible for me to receive those who merely pay their respects, except on days and during hours especially designated for the purpose. I earnestly request senators and representatives to aid me in securing for them uninterrupted interviews, by declining to introduce their constituents and friends when visiting the executive mansion during hours designated for their reception. Applicants for office will only prejudice their prospects by repeated importunity and by remaining at Washington to await result."

An Unfortunate Compliment.

Miss Elderly—There is nothing more lovely than youth. Don't you agree with me, doctor?
 Dr. Oldboy—Indeed I do, Miss Elderly. Miss Elderly—it is indeed a great pleasure to be young and happy.
 Dr. Oldboy—You are quite right, Miss Elderly, and yet I wish I was 30 years older than I am.
 Miss Elderly—And why do you wish to be 30 years older than you are, Dr. Oldboy?
 Dr. Oldboy (gallantly)—In that case, Miss Elderly, we would have been young together.—Texas Sittings.

The Result of Literature.

Policeman—So, yez young rascal, I've got yez at last, how is it? Where are the two young devils that wuz yer confederates?
 Nickel Jimmy (who has read deeply)—When did a Pequod ever betray his red skinned brother? Do you take me for a Mingo? My scalp may be found a-hangin' to the belt of the paleface an my tongue be splitted by his knife, but a oath binds me to my tribe, and I will not betray them. If the great Manitou wishes it, I kin die at sunrise, but my oath I will keep. It is register-red above!—Life.

He Made a Mistake.

To J. S.—We think that the young lady's indignation has a just foundation in your impertinence—that is, if your own statement of the affair be taken as the basis of facts. You had no business to hint that she used cosmetics even if you did "honestly think so." Her ringing for a glass of water and offering that and her handkerchief to you to enable you to test the matter on the spot by washing her cheeks was a masterpiece. She did a sensible thing in putting the question beyond doubt by rubbing her face, when you declined her offer, with her damp handkerchief, and then did a most becoming thing when she rang for the servant to show you out, stating that you wished to retire. That was well done. Such a spirited girl as that can have no need of cosmetics. You made a mistake and must now abide the consequences. That seems to us about the whole sum and essence of the matter.—New York Ledger.

Street Railway Crossings.

Grade crossings on street railways are as dangerous as on trunk lines and should be just as carefully protected. If a railroad company should cross the tracks of another, leaving the chances of collision to be avoided solely by the watchfulness of the engineer, there would be a great hue and cry. Yet similar carelessness is passed over in the case of street railways, though the danger is even greater on account of the increased frequency with which the tracks are used.—Kate Field's Washington.

A Bad Habit.

Mrs. Clamwhooper—John, you have a very annoying habit of saying "What's that?" whenever you are spoken to. Can't you break yourself of it?
 Mr. Clamwhooper (reading)—Eh—what's that?—Texas Sittings.

DIDN'T KNOW HER.

He entered the car with an offhand grace. An easy smile, and—a sample case. Two seats in one did he lightly whirl across from a not ill looking girl. With a traveling bag and a cartwheel hat. "Alone, by Jove! I will have a chat ere we have gone ten miles," he said. As he fitted his small cap on his head.

"The girls who travel in Texas are soft snaps, as a rule—too fresh by far. Just lend them a book—lift the window sash—No trouble at all to make a mash."

He did not know that the maiden small had been on the road two years last fall! A female drummer, with "grip" immense. And a lot of good, shrewd common sense.

This is the time and proper caper: "Miss, will you look at the morning paper?" And there on the margin the maiden read. "To do you a favor I'd give my head. That I might reap in turn, perchance, One gentle word—one kindly glance."

The engine whistled; the train slowed in. At a station known as the town of Laramie. The maiden rose with her sweetest smile. To the festive teacher across the aisle. And said she should relinquish her frailties and lace. "You may help me off with my sample case."
 —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Conundrum.

"Why is a river like the science of pugilism?" casually inquired the exchange editor.

"Because it's a case of bluff on both sides," promptly responded the financial editor. "That's an easy one. Why is a—"

"Don't be in such a hurry. You haven't guessed it yet."

The financial editor looked vaguely about as if for a weapon of some kind.

"Then it's because it gets pretty low down sometimes," he said, "and when it can't make a raise it has to dry up. Why is—"

"That won't do either."

"Isn't that the right answer?"

"It isn't within four counties of it."

"The trouble with your conundrums is they're too far fetched."

"How do you know? You haven't fetched this one yet. Whose conundrum is it anyhow?"

"You seem to be trying to shoulder it off on me."

"Well, if you can't answer it—"

"I can, though. Because the public—any profanity about it?"

"No."

"Because if there is I won't have anything to do with it."

"That isn't the correct answer either."

The financial editor glared at him and reached for his cane, but restrained himself with a violent effort.

"Because," he said, trying it once more, "because it runs mills—no, that won't do. Because when it gets full it always has more sand than when it"—

"You give me the carache!"

"Well, if you think nobody else knows anything about it suppose you answer it yourself."

"Because it all runs to mouth."

And the enraged bystanders interfered.—Chicago Tribune.

Too Much Boiled Down.

The effects of excessive condensation are abundantly exemplified in newspaper advertisements.

Some one advertises thus in an English journal:

For Sale—Airdale terrier dog, 2 years old; kill anything; very fond of children. Apply to—

—Youth's Companion.

So Reprehensible.

"No," said Mrs. Skidmore, "my temperance principles wouldn't allow me to go to hear Padover'ski."

"Your temperance principles!" exclaimed Mrs. Snooper in surprise.

"Yes. I saw it stated that he has frequently spent an hour over one bar."—Truth.

A Suggestion.

"I'm in a fighting mood today," said Hicks. "I'd like to lick somebody or something."

"Here," said Dawson, handing him one of the new stamps. "Lick that. Perhaps it'll satisfy you."—Harper's Bazar.

The Reason Why.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway is the favorite:

It is the oldest and was first in the field.
 Its train service is the very best.
 It is the first to adopt improvements.
 Its sleepers are palaces on wheels.
 It runs elegant drawing room sleepers on all-night trains.
 Its trains are lighted by electricity.
 It runs luxurious chair cars on day trains.
 It is the only line using the electric berth lamp.
 Its dining car service is unexcelled.
 Its trains run solid to Milwaukee and Chicago.
 It is the best route to St. Louis and the south.
 It is the best route to Kansas City and the west.
 It runs four trains daily to Milwaukee and Chicago.
 It runs two daily trains to St. Louis and Kansas City.
 It is the government fast mail route.
 It is popularly styled the "Old Reliable."
 It furnishes safety, comfort and speed to patrons.
