CERTAIN CONDITIONS.

Centrist Party Willing to Rally the Support of the Army Bill.

On Condition That the Jesuits Be Restored to Their Former Status in the Empire.

BERLIN, May 27.—The electoral out-look has considerably cleared since the issue, by Dr. Lieber, of the manifesto of the center or catholic party. The labored phraseology of the manifesto, and its long-winded sentences, were not calculated to impress the public and have elicited ridicule from the press. But the declaration did not fail to in- form the government of the price it must pay for the support of the party in the new reichstag. Behind the verbiage about intolerable military burdens imposed by the empire, advice is given to electors to take a decided position against the army bill and the Huene amendment to that measure.

"We shall transfer," says Dr. Lieber, "the Windthorst resolutions to the new parliament and use them for a guiding light in discussing all future military questions."

The Lieber faction of the center party is, in short, ready to negotiate with Caprivi on the basis of the repeal of the remaining religious disabilities and the readmission to Jesuits in return for its adherence to the government's military demands. Reactionary conservatives organs threaten, if the new reichstag is intractable, that the government will restrict the franchise and thus get an obedient parliament. The manifesto replies to this that the highest law is the constitution, adding: "We hold fast to the character of the empire as a federal state. The prerogatives of the people are based upon universal, equal, direct and secret suffrage."

The factor that is causing pain among the Bavarian centrists is the independent action of peasant societies, which hitherto have always supported centrist candidates. These societies have now issued an electoral address stating that their representatives up to this time have been co-operating in legislation ruinous to peasant proprietors, and paying altogether too much attention to religious questions. In the coming elections the peasant societies will support only candidates who are devoted to the agricultural interests of the country, and who are reliable as citizens, without regard to religious belief or social position.

The social democratic party will turn the disruption of the centrists to the best account. Amid this electoral charivari, the conservative, national liberal and freisinnige parties are not much heard of. The struggle lies between the socialists, who form a compact, well directed party, and the new political bodies composed of old elements, yet hardly in condition to know themselves.

The kulturkampf in Hungary, according to the Germania, is tending toward settlement, the pope offering to assent to a form of civil marriage consisting of a civil registrar at the church nuptial ceremony, with subsequent registration of the marriage. Other advices from Hungary show that the cabinet is not willing to accept this compromise, as a majority of the Hungarian diet want full liberty of civil marriage.

Cowboy Race Off.

BOSTON, May 27.—President George P. Angell, of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, makes public the following: "Whereas, some 300 or more western cowboys propose to start on Sunday, June 25, from Chadron, Neb., for a race of 700 miles to Chicago for money, no man being allowed more than two horses, I do hereby offer, in behalf of the American Humane Education society and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, as a prize, as may be preferred, $100 in money, or a gold medal costing that amount, to the man or woman who shall do most to prevent this terrible race, which, if accomplished, will be, in the view of all humane people of the world, both christian and heathen, a national disgrace."

DENVER, May 27.—The protest against the cowboy race from Chadron, Neb., comes a little late as the race is declared off and the entrance fee was returned to all the proposed competitors over a week ago.

Found the Outlaws.

VISALIA, May 27.—Two detectives, Black and Burns, who have been hunting for the train robbers, Sontag and Evans, met the fate of all other detectives who have been hunting for these notorious bandits. The detectives were occupying a cabin near this city, and the bandits learning of this fact through friends, sought out the detectives and shot at them as they were returning to the cabin last night. The shots wounded Black in the arm and thigh. Burns escaped, and, thinking his companion dead, came here for help. Black crawled into the cabin and fired several shots at the retreating bandits and is thought to have wounded one of them. Black was brought here this morning in a wagon. The detectives had a cabin near Camp Baldy, about twenty miles east of here in the mountains, near where Evans and Sontag are supposed to be hiding. The men were shot by the bandits as they were returning to the cabin about 9:15 last night. The weapons used were shotguns.

Now Try This.

It will cost you nothing and will surely do you good, if you have a cough, cold or any trouble with throat, chest or lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is guaranteed to give relief or money will be paid back. Sufferers from a gripple found it just the thing, and under its use had a speedy and perfect recovery. Here the students of agriculture could have experimented with every product of the soil that matures in the temperate zone and fitted themselves for the pursuit of scientific agriculture in any portion of the country. But it was not to be, and more's the pity.

The Grand Central

Railroad station, Chicago, is being fitted up for hotel purposes during the world's fair. This magnificent fire proof structure located at the corner of Harrison street and Fifth avenue in the very heart of the city, will devote the 3rd, 4th and 5th floors to this purpose. It will be run on European plan; each room will have hot and cold water, electric lights and be steam heated. The office and ladies' parlors, etc., will be located on the third floor and the building will be supplied with all modern conveniences. There will be from 100 to 200 rooms for guests.

This acquisition to the hotel facilities of Chicago will be appreciated by those who wish to be safely housed in a fire proof building, conveniently located. Those desiring accommodations can secure them by addressing Mr. T. P. Clifford, the manager, at Chicago. The hotel will be opened May 15th, 1893. The Grand Central station is the Chicago depot of the Northern Pacific railroad (Wisconsin Central division) and by taking that through car line to the world's fair city, visitors will avoid the discomfort of transfer of themselves and baggage through the city. From this station trains run direct to the World's Fair grounds during the day.

He Introduces His Boy to the Heat of the Chicago. Bingleton was checking to himself all the morning, which was rather singular, for Bingleton was a morose sort of a fellow. His fellow bookkeepers at Barber, McLiss & Co.'s banking establishment had frequently averred that Bingleton was a convincing exhibit in the chain of evidence proving the evolution of man from the vegetable kingdom. Bingleton's original ancestor, they were certain, had been nothing more or less than a lemon, and in the growth from lemon to Bingleton nothing but the form and capabilities had been changed. The sourness all remained.

Suddenly, however, Bingleton began to pan out a new kind of ore, as it were. Occasional chuckles had been noted for months, but such a series of them as this morning had added was something hitherto entirely unknown.

"Some one of his friends must have died," whispered one of the clerks to his vis-a-vis. "I don't believe anything but misfortune could make Bingleton smile, and chuckles like that must indicate some dire happening in his circle—if he has a circle." "I don't believe he has a circle," said another clerk. "If he has, he's probably at the very central point, so that no part of the circle shall be nearer to him than he can possibly help."

"I think it's important enough to ask about," observed the first clerk. "He may be going mad."

So Bingleton was requested to explain why he chuckled. Contrary to their expectations, he received their inquiries pleasantly and explained.

"I'm laughing at some things my boy has been saying recently," he replied. "You haven't a boy, have you?" queried the clerk.

"How could he say things to make me laugh if I hadn't?" asked Bingleton, with a frown. "Of course he couldn't," said the clerk meekly, "but you never told us that you had a boy, you know, Bingleton, and so if the sudden realization that you have knocks us silly, you oughtn't to be angry with us."

"That's all right," Bingleton replied. "I don't wonder the boy knocks you silly, because alongside of him all other boys dwindle into half witted creatures. The point about my boy is that although he is not quite 5 years old, he says such awfully bright things. For instance, the other night when his mother was singing him to sleep, he said, 'I know what stars are for, mamma. What are they for, Henderson?' she asked—'he's named Henderson, after my wife's brother George. His last name was Henderson—and so was my wife's for that matter. But to come back to the thing he said, 'I know what the stars are for, mamma,' said he. 'What are they for, Henderson?' she asked.

"You see, we always make it a point to inquire into the slightest little thing in which the boy takes an interest. That's only right, you know. If parents would be more considerate of their children's views, the race would be the better for it. My parents were always so with me, and I feel the good effects of it every day I live. The other course makes cynics of children and makes them appear to others to be out of sympathy with the world. So when Henderson said, 'I know what stars are for, mamma,' Mrs. Bingleton very naturally said, 'What are they for, Henderson?' Then he blurted out with, 'Street lamps for birds.' Wasn't that bright? By jove, I've been laughing more than a week over that."

Here Bingleton gazed sternly over the top of his spectacles at the second clerk, whose mirth did not seem to be altogether adequate to the situation. "You don't appear to see the point of that remark, Mr. Tompkins," he said. "Oh—indeed I do. He-he-ha-ha!" laughed Tompkins. "Why, of course, I don't show my mirth quite so effusively as other people do, that's all. Besides, I think the humor of the boy's remark is not of the side-splitting sort. It gives rise to an intellectual guffaw down in one's—ah—in one's insides. It is the same kind of laughter one indulges in over some subtle bit of humor which—er—which one would rather expect to find in a volume of essays than in a comic paper."

"He must be a very bright boy," said the first clerk.

"Oh, that isn't anything to some of the things Henderson says," said Bingleton. "He told me the other night that grass was green because it wasn't red, white and blue. And when he was up in the country last summer he told a farmer that he oughtn't to let the sheep lick their chops for fear of swallowing the paint. You see, Henderson's toy sheep have painted mouths, and of course—"

"But I don't see how sheep could lick their own chops," said Mr. Tompkins. "The chops come from the sheep's ribs, and they're inside, not outside."

"If you had Henderson's brains," Bingleton retorted, "you'd know that the chops I referred to the sheep's licking were not lamb or mutton chops, but chops in the slang sense, referring to the jaws."

"Do you let your boy use slang?" queried the clerk.

"I do not, sir, but when a lad under 5 is capable of saying things like that the substance of it is so pleasing that I can overlook the form of it. Furthermore, you gentlemen are neglecting your work. If you do not waste less of your employers' time, I shall deem it my duty to speak to them about it."

"What was the use of irritating the old man, Bingleton?" queried Tompkins. "I wanted to stave him off. If we'd let him go on, he'd have put us to sleep with the dazzling wit of Bingleton, Jr.," said Bingleton.

"You did right," said Tompkins. And silence reigned once more.—Harper's Bazar.

The World's Fair—What It Means. It means that from May 1st until Oct. 21st there will be on exhibition in Chicago the triumphs of all the ages. The rarest and choicest specimens of the handiwork of man from the nations of the earth will be there to instruct and delight.

That for six months Chicago will be the most cosmopolitan spot on the globe. That the American people will have the wonderful opportunity of mingling with and observing the habits and characteristics of the people of every nation in the world.

That "villages" of the different foreign countries, constructed by and made up entirely of people direct from such countries, will be a most interesting feature of the fair.

That the American citizen, of whatever foreign birth or parentage, may carry himself back again to the land of his origin by visiting and studying these foreign "villages."

That a few days or weeks spent at the World's Fair will be worth years of travel.

That this is the grandest opportunity the American people have ever had for interesting study and pleasure, and that a trip to Chicago during the next six months would be the event of a lifetime.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway offers the best and most frequent train service from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago. The only line lighting its trains by electricity. The most perfect dining service and the most sleeping cars in this country. Ask your agent for tickets via "The Milwaukee"—the Government's Fast Mail Line, or address
