EXTRA SESSION.

The Chief Topic for Discussion Now Is, "Shall we Have an Extra Session?"

Miles City Republicans Are Most Enthusiastically Opposed to It for Various Reasons Herein Expressed.

The pertinacity with which certain Democratic cliques in the state are working to induce the governor to call an extra session of the legislature has naturally called forth considerable comment from Republicans, and as the subject is of present interest, the JOURNAL has caught a few of the opinions expressed by prominent Republicans, "on the fly" as it were, and reproduces them below:

H. M. Moran—I am opposed to the convening of the legislature in special session for the reasons: First, That it seems like making an abject surrender to the Democratic party; second, because I have not been able to convince myself that under existing circumstances one more vote in the senate would help silver; third, because the leading silver men in this state are in my opinion wholly responsible for the failure to elect a senator last winter, and any argument urging an extra session on behalf of silver loses all force in this connection.

Charles O'Neil—I am not in favor of an extra session and hope that the governor will stand pat.

Nathan Hockett—I fully endorse the governor's views in the matter, and hope he will not be induced to recede from them. Another session of the mob that met in Helena last winter would be a greater calamity than we could bear.

F. M. Kreidler—I will not embarrass Gov. Rickards with a recommendation to do or not to do anything, but I will say that when our legislature adjourned sine die many patriotic citizens thanked God and took courage. Suffering as our people now do, we surely ought to be spared the infliction of a special session of that body for any purpose whatsoever.

J. B. Collins—The state has no assurance but what the disgraceful scenes of the last legislature will be re-enacted. Again the recent result of the silver debate in the House is but a forecast of what the country has reason to believe will be the result in the Senate. Consequently it will be so overwhelmingly against silver that Montana's extra vote, should a senator be elected, would make no perceptible change. All honor to Gov. Rickards for declining to call an extra session of the legislature, particularly at this time and under existing circumstances.

J. E. Light—The recollection of last winter's futile attempts to elect a United States senator are too fresh to allow a sober second thought to favor convening the legislature at this juncture to do what could not be done at the regular session. Deplorable as our situation is there is no assurance that an extra session would remedy it. There are no merits shown or assurances given to warrant the governor in setting aside the default of the legislature.

T. J. Porter—I am opposed to an extra session because it would necessitate expensive elections in all the new counties and many of the old; because it would be impossible for some of the present members of the legislature to attend a session any time within the next three months; further, it would be useless, because there is no reasonable hope that an extra session would result in any election; a legislature that could not elect a senator in sixty days would not come any nearer an election in six months than it was at adjournment, and above all other reasons I am opposed to it because the people are disgusted with the proceedings of the last session, and do not want another session until they have had a chance to choose the members of the legislature that assembles to elect a senator.

Chas. H. Loud—In answer to the query, "Shall an extra session of the Legislature be called, if not, why not?" It would seem to me that a few Democratic millionaires are trying to work up a sentiment in favor of an extra session, and I, why, permit me to ask, did not these same philanthropists, while in Washington, use their best efforts to get the silver Democrats in the Senate to sink partisanship and seat Mr. Mantle, the most eloquent advocate for silver in Montana, if these professions are sincere? If an extra session is called there is every prospect of a re-enactment of the disgraceful proceedings of last winter. My answer is in the negative.

L. A. Huffman—I cannot see what could be gained by convening the legislature at this time. I do not believe it practical to secure any guarantee that the majority would come any nearer an election than they did last winter. If the governor should move in the matter at once the unavoidable delays—not considering such delay as might occur by reason of the failure of the majority to elect—would make it a hundred to one that the senator-elect would not get there in time to participate in the present silver legislation.

S. H. Lovett. In refusing to reconvene the legislature, the governor not only voices the sentiments of the republicans of this immediate vicinity, but also, in my opinion, speaks the will of the wisely economical people, all over the state.
