FIELD'S NECK SAVED.

Governor Rickards Has Rerieved Him Until July 6.

If the Papers Don't Reach Livingston on Time Today Sheriff Conrow Says
the Execution Will Take Place.

LIVINGSTON, June 21.—A motion for a stay of execution and for a new trial in the Fields murder case was argued before Judge Henry this forenoon. The arguments consumed the entire forenoon and after the noon recess the court overruled the motion for a new trial and denied the application for a stay of execution.

It was the first appearance of the condemned man since his sentence. His face was haggard and it wore the hue of death, while his eyes were sunken and his lips tightly compressed. The strain has told on him greatly within the past 24 hours and it was noticed that his step was far from being as firm as it was at the time of his sentence. There was the same defiant, demon-like expression in his eyes, notwithstanding their sunken condition.

Field was brought over to the court house and taken back to the jail by the sheriff and one deputy, and was not dandified. As he passed through the jail yard he stopped in front of the scaffold and examined it critically without saying a word.

The condemned man was visited shortly afterwards by his aged mother. She broke down and wept for the first time since his sentence. Field was visibly affected by his mother's evidence of grief. He quickly dried his eyes, however, and the next minute he was as composed and social as ever.

The scaffold was painted this afternoon, and everything is in readiness for the execution. The rope was adjusted this afternoon and tested once with a 150 pound bag of sand. The test was satisfactory. Crowds of people visited the jail yard this evening to take a look at the instrument of death, and the sidewalks are blocked with the residents of the city and people from the country, and everywhere the forthcoming hanging is the sole topic of conversation.

Immediately after the motion for a new trial had been overruled the defendant's attorneys informed Governor Rickards by wire, and at 5 o'clock this afternoon Judge Henry received a message from his excellency asking if it was a fact that the court had overruled a motion denying a stay of execution, and if the statement of the motion of appeal to the supreme court had been filed in the district court. Judge Henry answered in the affirmative by wire.

Governor Rickards then granted Field a respite until July 6. The news was received from Helena at 9:30 o'clock to-night in the shape of telegrams from the governor to Sheriff Conrow, County Attorney Miller and the defendant's attorneys. The dispatch to the sheriff was as follows:

I have granted Anderson, alias Field, sentenced to be executed tomorrow, a respite until July 6, pending the hearing of appeal to the supreme court made by his attorneys. You are hereby directed to delay the execution accordingly. Papers will be sent by first mail. Acknowledge the receipt of this telegram. (Signed) J. E. RICKARDS.

Sheriff Conrow immediately acknowledged the receipt of the telegram and wired further:

I will wait till near 4 o'clock p. m. tomorrow for the papers granting a respite to Anderson, at which time the execution will take place if the papers are not here. (Signed) JOHN M. CONROW.

The condemned man had just been shaved when the county attorney entered the jail with the telegram granting the reprieve. When the message had been read to him a pleased smile flitted over his face and his whole countenance changed. It was a supremely happy moment for the respited murderer and he showed his joy in various ways.

A little later he asked if the people were excited and wanted to know if a mob was gathering. It was apparent that he was afraid that when the news of his reprieve became circulated around town a mob would collect and stretch his neck, anyhow.

Young Mortimer, the accomplice, was the most scared one of the two, however, and frequently asked the jailer if he thought a mob would be able to get into the jail.

Riverside Not Included.

MISSOULA, June 21.—The Riverside breeding farm was not included in the property transferred by Mr. Daly to the Anaconda Mining company. The instrument filed with the recorder of Ravalli county was dated May 1, 1894, and the property transferred is described as all the personal and property rights acquired by Marcus Daly from the Bitter Root Development company by deed of April 27, 1894, and includes the townsite of Hamilton, also buildings, warehouses, stock in trade, saw mill, timber cut and uncut, timber lands and timber cutting privileges hitherto owned by the Bitter Root Development company, water rights, flumes, ditches, etc., and several ranches, and all the lands acquired by deed from Wm. Toole of April 27, 1894.

Death Before Disgrace.

OMAHA, June 20.—George A. Steptonbach, a former merchant of San Francisco, threw himself beneath the wheels of a railroad train at Emerson, Neb., this morning and was cut to pieces. He was en route from Minneapolis to San Francisco, where he was wanted for a crooked business transaction.

He was in charge of Officer H. P. Handley. He told the officer he would never return to California and face disgrace. After putting irons on the prisoner the officer thought him safe.

"Curious Woman."

He was showing them the various pictures hanging on the wall. They were gams, for he really had excellent taste in art. They were choice bits of landscape, lovely ideals of humanity, studies of still life and hints from the impressionist school. The ladies viewed each with admiration, but none with especial interest until they came to a huge frame with its face turned toward the wall. Immediately they were all interest.

"What is that?" asked one of the ladies.

The young man assumed an air of mystery and shook his head as though he would like to tell, but could not.

"Aren't you going to let us see it?" said one in surprise.

"I'm sorry, but you can't," began he.

"But, really, we'd like more to see than any of the others. Wouldn't we, girls?"

The girls said they would.

"Well," said the exhibitor, "if you must see it, I suppose you must."

The young ladies conjured up all kinds of beautiful visions as they looked with expectancy on the mysterious back of the frame.

"It is called 'Curious Woman,'" said he. Of course that only increased the seal. Finally he turned the frame and disclosed—a mirror. Were the young ladies disappointed?—Philadelphia Press.

Dumas' Social Tax.

At one time it was the custom, and may be now, for English commercial travelers to contribute a small uniform sum to one of their charitable institutions every time they dined together.

M. Alexandre Dumas suggested that every guest at a dinner party should hand a franc to the host, who should remit the amount subscribed to some philanthropic institution. Those who are obliged to decline the invitations to dine should nevertheless inclose their franc with their note of excuse. The great writer inaugurated his idea by taxing a friend who dined at his house a franc, and this is possibly the total revenue derived as yet from this social tax.—Temple Bar.

The Time to Travel.

Horace Greeley excited much inane laughter among a certain class of people some twenty years ago, by his declaration, "the way to resume is to resume." The true way to do anything is to do it whenever you feel the time is come. David Dudley Field, who at ninety is the wonder of the world of lawyers, attributes his hale old age to among other causes, "eating what I like, letting the rest alone, and sleeping when I am weary." Similarly, the way to take a vacation is to—take a vacation. It seems almost impossible to pound it into some people that business, society or politics, can spare their indispensable aid for a week or so, and so they go on in a tread-mill grind, until some day they drop out forever, and the world-machine, goes right on. The time to travel is—now, and no pleasanter season can be found than this. The great states of Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming and South Dakota don their gayest dress now, and in none of them is the summer yet advanced enough to cause discomfort. Break away from your store, office, wheatfield or pine forest, and see what are the cornfields and orchards of Illinois and Nebraska, the gold and silver mines of Colorado, the healing springs and tin mines of South Dakota—find out what is just over your horizon. To all these states there is one best way,—to travel via the Burlington Route. Your home ticket agent will give you all necessary information, or you can write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent St. Paul, Minn.

This Time Last Year.
