WHEN WILLIE GOT HOME

UNT ANN was just descending her front steps when Willie came sauntering along the sidewalk, hands in pockets, cap rakishly pushed over one ear, whistling shrilly. When he saw her he stopped whistling and grinned. "Why, Willie West!" Aunt Ann puffed anxiously. Being short and stout and 55, that was her usual manner of talking. "Why, Willie West!" she repeated, coming down to the gate and leaning upon it. "What are you doing out of school at this hour? It's only 11 o'clock! What has happened?"

It was a noticeable characteristic of the West family that all the elder members immediately on seeing Willie invariably inquired what had happened. Doubtless the fact that something always did happen when Willie was near had led to the formation of this habit. Now Willie only grinned again and described an arc on the cement walk with the stubby toe of his shoe. Then he looked up at Aunt Ann and his eyes sparkled.

"Teacher sent me home," he said. Aunt Ann's mouth set in the martyred lines with which people meet bad news bravely. She folded her fat arms, gazing as sternly as possible at the urchin, who was grinning up at her from under his shock of yellow hair.

"Why—Willie—West!" she breathed, tragically. "I—am—surprised! Think how dreadful your mother will feel! And you promised to be good after you were sent home the other time!"

Willie dropped his eyes and scuffed the sidewalk. He showed signs of edging away.

"I know I did," he confessed. When he got a few steps away from the gate he broke into a run toward home.

"He's such a bother," said Aunt Ann to herself, shaking her head as she watched him. "I don't see what they ever are going to do with that boy!"

Willie entered his home circumspectly and hung up his cap properly before going into the living room. His mother dropped her work startled at the sight of him. Then, evidently suspecting the worst, she leaned back in her chair quickly.

"Why, Willie!" she cried. "What have you done now? Or are you sick? I know you've been doing something—what is it?"

Willie twisted around on one heel. His mother grasped him by the arm to stop the completion of a hole in a Turkish rug.

"Don't do that!" she said, sharply. "How many times have I told you? What has happened?"

Her son did not look at her. "Teacher sent me home," he said, in a low voice.

There was silence.

"I don't see," began his mother at last, in level tones, "what I shall do with you, Willie! There isn't a bit of use in talking to you! It just runs off like water from a duck! It isn't as if you were a little boy, either. You know what your father promised he'd do to you if you were sent home from school again?"

"Yes'm," said Willie, mournfully. "I know."

"And he always keeps his word," went on his mother, sternly.

"Yes'm," agreed Willie—and sighed.

"It just makes me feel awful," said his mother, "to think I have a son I can't trust. A son who has to be sent home from school. Other mothers can be proud of their boys. Don't you care how you make me feel?"

"Yes'm," said Willie, bending the leaves of a magazine.

"Don't do that!" said his mother. "Your father hasn't even read it. I can't tell you how surprised I am at you!"

Willie wriggled and began fussing with the ink bottle.

"Don't do that!" said his mother. "You'll spill it. And go wash your hands at once—just look at them! I don't know how to punish you."

"You said papa—" began Willie.

"Oh, he'll attend to you!" promised his mother. "But that's a long while off—till night. I don't think I'll let you have any luncheon—and there's to be rice pudding with raisins in it."

Willie looked up rapturously. Then drew down his mouth piteously.

"Please, ma," he begged.

"No, indeed!" she said, firmly, refusing to have brought his sin home to him. "No pudding for a boy like you!"

"Aw, say, ma," he cried, "can't you take a joke? I was just foolin' you. Everybody was sent home, same as me. We had examination in our grade this morning an' as soon as we finished Miss Graham let us go home, an' I got through early. Honest!"

"And you didn't do anything naughty?" inquired his mother, in bewilderment.

"No, honest," said Willie. "Not this time. I can have some pudding, can't I?"

"Why, Willie West!" gasped his mother, helplessly. "I suppose so. The idea of getting me all stirred up over nothing!"—Chicago Daily News.

The Local Roundup.

Jos Asbridge was in from Pine Grove Monday.

Fresh oysters for sale at Schlaberg's all the time.

J. C. Carey is the new bookkeeper in Marshall's store.

C. M. Jacobs was up from Musselshell Wednesday.

Tom Lamb was a Lewistown visitor Sunday and Monday.

C. C. Morris was a Miles City visitor several days this week.

The best place to get your pianos is the Art Music Store, Lewistown.

Martin Benz left last week for a visit at his old home in South Dakota.

High grade sewing machines—easy payments. Marshall's Busy Corners.

Harry Grant, manager of the Adams Hotel at Lavina, was in town Monday.

E. G. Worden, lawyer, First National Bank block. Both phones 127, Lewistown, Mont. 13tf

President Thos. Gibson, of the United Mine Workers, of Dietz, Wyo., was in town Tuesday.

The first cement sidewalks in Roundup are those being laid in front of the new Kelly building.

John Donahue of Bozeman was a visitor in town several days last week leaving Saturday morning.

B. F. Bruckert left the fore part of the week for Lat, Mont., where, we understand, he went to get married.

Father Mueller returned Tuesday evening from a trip to Belt and Lewistown. He was gone about a week.

Misses Mayme and Susie McCleary were up from Musselshell Tuesday to attend the Eagles dance here that evening.

A. T. Miller has resigned his position as clerk in the Marshall store and is now employed as bookkeeper by J. W. and P. L. Newton.

B. F. Bauckert is building a four-room cottage on First Street west, opposite the school house. Lewsi and Eubank have the contract.

Dr. G. E. O'Neil, Dentist, office first door north of Shrum's store. Gold crowns, bridge work and cast gold inlays a specialty. 34-36

Carl N. Thompson and L. R. Carroll have rented the north half of the Gilder building on Main street and moved into it this week.

In the list of committees appointed by the Commercial Club as published in the Record last week, the name of E. W. Ray should be included in the committee on "Fire and Water."

If you want a good Thanksgiving turkey give the Roundup Meat Market your order. Orders also taken for geese, ducks and chickens. Box of soap given away free with each order. Morris & Co.

George Osborne, who has been a resident of Roundup since early last spring, left for Chicago Tuesday morning where he has been offered a lucrative position with a well known bond company. He expects to return to Roundup next spring.

The plans for the Citizens Bank of Roundup are now being prepared by Lewis & Eubank and it is expected the contract for the building will be let in a very short time. It is to be a 20x30 frame one story structure, and will be located on the corner lot south of Schrum's store.

W. F. Patterson, who has been employed in Marshall's store as clerk for some time, has resigned his position and has accepted a similar one with August Schrum. Mr. Patterson is a salesman of experience and ability and he will be a substantial addition to Mr. Schrum's sales force.

H. L. Allen of the H. L. Allen & Co., lumber dealers of Billings, was in town Wednesday looking over our town of which he said he has heard so much. His visit more than substantiated the stories of the rapid growth of the "Queen City of the Musselshell" which have been circulated over the country. The Allen Company has branch yards at about a half dozen different points on the N. P. and it is possible that they will extend their operations into this part of the country.

The Busy Bee Restaurant, formerly the Lone Star, opened to the public Monday and has been enjoying success in a good measure. The place has been entirely remodelled and painted and presents a very neat appearance. The meals served at the new place are first class in every respect and the service excellent. Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Fowler, who are conducting the place, are experienced restaurant people and will undoubtedly keep it up to the high standard it is maintaining now.

Jos. Asbridge of Pine Grove was a business visitor in town Monday and loaded his wagon with winter supplies at Marshall's Busy Corner.

Chas. B. Marshall, the well-known and popular Lewistown attorney, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday, having accompanied Mrs. Marshall and little daughter, this far, who went to Chicago on a visit. While here Mr. Marshall made arrangements for the purchase of several lots and he says Roundup looks goods to him.

LEFT WITH HONORS OF WAR

Parting Shot of Little Bostonese Withered Up Young Philadelphia.

It was at the seaside that the little fellows met, the one from Boston, the other Philadelphia. Being just six and eight respectively, they did not as yet realize the great social distinction between them. They became fast friends.

It was after a long, trying day on the beach that the quarrel began. Hot words tumbled over one another with furious speed.

"Oh, you're bughouse!" said the little Philadelphia.

For a moment there was silence. Then a pained expression flitted over the Bostonian youngster's face. That was the last straw.

With head held proudly and with stately mien he made as if to leave, and in dignified silence. But, human nature prevailing, he could not leave without one parting thrust.

"We don't say bughouse in Boston; it isn't elegant. We say beetle-garage," uttering which he left the field of battle, swearing solemn oaths that in future he would keep away from sordid types of this character.

KNEW GIRL NATURE.

"We were overstocked with ladies' ties, but our boss was smart enough to work them off."

"How did he manage it?"

"Simply enough. Put 'em in the men's department."
