Prof. Thomas Shaw: Stop gambling in sowing crops. By this I do not mean gambling in the bad sense, but gambling in the sense of dealing in uncertainties. If the farmer in the dry country sows a crop on ill prepared land, he is incurring the hazard of failure. If he sows his crop on spring plowed land, unless it be perhaps a cultivated crop, he does it at the risk of failure. If he sows crops that ripen late, he is taking more risk than if he sowed crops that ripen early.

The right figure will be the number of deaths; the middle will be the number of living sisters and the left will show the number of living brothers. Try it and see.

The longest fence in the world and the queerest artificial boundary established between two countries anywhere will in the near future separate the United States and Mexico. According to the Mexico Record, a final agreement to the effect has been drawn between the two governments and the fence will be built in the very near future. It will be constructed of stout posts, possibly re-enforced concrete and five-strand steel-high barbed wire. In all places where the United States government owns the land the fence will be set up about 60 yards to the north of the true boundary line and where the ground is owned individually the fence will stand on the exact border. Mounted Mexicans rurales will patrol the fence on the south and United States rangers will do the same on the north. About 1,000 miles of fence will be erected.
