The water bond election which will be held on the 6th of January is the second one to be held on the same question. While the wish of the people in general was expressed forcibly in the first election to be held, it was found necessary to hold the second, in order that certain small technicalities required by the bond purchasers be complied with. The question is the same, the proposition is the same, and the vote it is confidently expected will be about the same or if anything different, perhaps a larger majority in favor of the issue. The ground has been so thoroly gone over, and the advantages are so obvious to all of the people of the city that no one can help but see them. There will no doubt be a few who will vote against the measure as before but they are only the small minority who for some personal reason, do not feel that they can give the cause their support. But after the city gets the ownership of the plant, these men will probably turn to help loyally to make it a big thing for the community. That is the Roundup spirit. When Roundup owns it, it will get enthusiastic support.

The advent of a new year always induces reflection. It is recognized as a time of change. We are wont to take stock of ourselves as well as of our material wealth. And fortunate indeed is he who finds the balance on the right side of his ledger. Many of us in our annual appraisal of spiritual progress during the year past, are going to find a deficiency; no matter then, how great an increase in the material prosperity, the greater thing has been missed. Many of us are going to resolve to do better, to live more truly, to act more kindly, to speak with greater gentleness of the shortcomings of others, to deal more generously with those not gifted with our cleverness, and to cultivate in greater degree, the finer part of our natures. And those resolutions are going to benefit us. This awakening of our spirit will rejuvenate us; will, even if failure attend the effort, in the larger sense, leave a benediction on our senses.

The Record wishes to extend to all, the best wishes for all good things for the coming year. May your burdens grow lighter, your sorrows fewer; may your cares be lessened, your worries done away with. May your happiness be multiplied, your courage enhanced; may your hope light up the way and love immeasurable reward you. And we hope that such trials as may come your way, you will find strength to easily overcome. That a full measure of material rewards for your efforts will come to you and the world benefit from your success we earnestly wish.

WEEKLY HOMILIES

Some men get so enthusiastic over being able to resolve not to smoke during the coming year, that they go out and get drunk to celebrate the occasion.

xxxxxx

If dancing progresses during the coming year as it has in the past year or two, tickets to the sidewalks will be worth more than the tickets admitting to the floor.

xxxxxx

Pa says that his mother is the only woman he ever knew who didn't need to resolve not to worry herself gray over coming styles.

Probably on the morning of January 2nd, both the man who resolved to get drunk to celebrate and the man who resolved to swear off, feel like swearing at themselves.

There may be one virtue in the present styles of dress for women; in the present craze for dancing, it eliminate broad-jumping and high kicking at least.

If you could analyze the reason for the wondering look in the eyes of the young, you would probably find that they wonder why the world doesn't seem to realize how little you know. And you used to wonder that way about others, yourself once.

Some men are so blame deceitful that they actually try to make themselves believe that they know something.

There's one thing that's particularly tough about the life of a prisoner; those in charge will not seem to listen to demands for a change of boarding place.

Those fellows who like to have their characters plainly read, and their fortunes told without hesitancy, should ask some mother of a first baby how it happens that the kid is so cranky and homely.

A man may be quite noisy about being boss in his own house when he is among his pals at 2 a. m. but he doesn't have much to say about it when he takes his shoes off on the porch and sneaks upstairs when he gets home fifteen minutes later.

We have known men who would cheerfully walk a mile and split a cord of wood for an able bodied widow, but would grumble like the dickens if they had to carry in kindling for their wives to start the kitchen fire with in the morning.

We wonder if the inventor of the stocking coin purse got put out of business by the inventor of the slit skirt.

Your sweetheart weeps if she is displeased with you, but your wife is apt to express her displeasure by candid statements of facts observed.

The University of Christmas.

Primarily, of course, Christmas is a religious festival. In the Christian, with a sincere belief in the Christ, who is the foundation rock of his religion, the words of priest and pastor exhorting his flock to observe the day with ceremonial observances, find a fervent response. From every pulpit is told anew each year the story of him with out whom Christmas had never been.

But Christmas appeals also to the nonbeliever in Christ, to the men and women who cannot subscribe conscientiously to the doctrine of his divinity. It is trite, perhaps, to say that as Christmas approaches the Christmas spirit is "in the air," but it is true none the less. "Peace and good will" pervade the air that is breathed alike by churchgoer and nonattendant.

In the big cities Christmas is celebrated by Christian and Jew and Mohammedan as well as by those with no religion. In the outermost corners of the earth, wherever men of Christian faith have borne the standard of civilization, the native heathen in intimate contact with them feel the coming of the spirit and rejoice.

It is well that this should be so, for the spirit of Christmas is the spirit of belief not only in Christ, but in one's fellow men. Every one may share in it if he will. Every one may find in the story of the life that was lived in Palestine nineteen centuries ago, of the death that was met on the cross and of the resurrection that followed, something of personal application, something of uplift.
