Brief and Breezy

Senator Knox is not only nursing a presidential boom, but a fine able-bodied 12-pound grandson.
Break the news softly to Mr. Taft when he arrives, that his loom was knocked down in the first round.
Presidential booms are pretty thick around the country, just now; a year hence, everything will be over but the inauguration.
Now Gen. Grosvenor talks of becoming a candidate for the Senate. He was never more useful than in his present retirement from public life.
There is as much of a fresh egg stringency in this country, as a money stringency.
Oklahoma is determined to start out with a complete "Jim Crow system."
The Republican politicians are also disturbed by "man who is bigger than his party."
Gen. Grosvenor says he wouldn't mind being elected Senator. Or anything else.
When Washington votes on prohibition, will each Senator be allowed to put in a quart or so of ballots?
Woodrow Wilson says only ten per cent of the people think, but a lot of them think they think.
Congress slept quietly through the Presidential sermon.
If currency were as plentiful as currency bills, in Congress there would be no complaint about the shortage of money.
