GOV. TOOLE RESIGNS OFFICE

Failing Health of Chief Executive Given As Reason for Sudden Action.

Helena, Feb. 1.—Gov. Joseph K. Toole today addressed his resignation as chief executive of the state of Montana to Secretary of State A. C. Toker, to take effect April 1. Ill health has prompted Mr. Toole's resignation from the gubernatorial office, according to the reasons set forth in a statement accompanying the resignation. It is the intention of Gov. Toole to shortly leave for California, where he proposes to remain several months in the hope of regaining his former strength, when he plans to return to Montana and resume the practice of law.

Lieut. Gov. Edwin Norris of Dillon will immediately assume the duties of the executive office as soon as Gov. Toole leaves the state, but will not be administered the oath of office until the resignation of Gov. Toole shall have become effective.

Gov. Toole's statement accompanying his resignation is as follows: "My resignation has been filed with the secretary of state, to take effect April 1. At least that much, it would seem, is due to my illness, who, under the constitution, must take up his residence at Helena.

"I have been out of health much of the time for several years, and at times have been obliged to draw too heavily upon energies that ought to have been conserved. I have been disappointed and believe that I ought to spend four or five months at a lower altitude, giving special attention to the recuperation of my health. Under the laws of Montana (sections 970-971, political code) the governor and certain other enumerated state officers are prohibited from absenting themselves from the state for more than sixty consecutive days unless on business of the state or with the consent of the legislative assembly.

"It may be that the legislature is without authority to thus interfere with the tenure of an office created by the constitution. But if it is competent to do so it is not improbable that a plausible pretense might be invoked to evade so stern a statute, however wholesome it might prove in a particular case. But whether the law is right or wrong, wise or unwise, I have no disposition to contest its plain provisions or defeat its manifest meaning.

"It is not, however, without deep regret that I surrender my commission nine months before its expiration and sever official relations with my associates who have been most helpful to me in the transaction of the public business.

"I am reminded at this time, and may be pardoned for referring to the fact, that my political life has covered a wide range. Twice district attorney, member of the legislature, twice delegate to congress in territorial days, member of the constitutional convention that framed the organic law of the state, and, with the exception of eight years, governor of Montana since its admission into the union. During my several terms as governor almost the entire body of existing laws has been enacted.

"It would be strange indeed if, during the last quarter of a century, in which party feeling has often run high, mistakes have not been made and criticism more or less deserved had not followed; but today, void of all animosities—personal, political or otherwise—I find no comfort except in pleasant retrospect.

"I behold a great sovereign state flourishing in this mountain land where less than twenty years ago local self-government was but a dream. A capitol building of noble proportions and superb appointments has been erected, untouched by the breath of scandal, out of the proceeds of a federal land grant practically without cost to the state. A soldiers' home, educational, charitable, reformatory and penal institutions under state supervision, sufficient in numbers and adequate in equipment for many years to come, are among the monuments of generosity and progress of our citizens, and yet the rate of taxation for state purposes has never exceeded 2½ mills.

"The reclamation of vast tracts of arid land by a governmental system of irrigation and the successful demonstration of dry land farming in various sections of the state are making homes for thousands and adding millions of dollars annually to our permanent wealth.

"Our banks, national and state, are fairly anchored in the confidence of the people, and have never for a moment staggered under the strain that has lately fallen on similar institutions in other states.

"Two transcontinental railroads span the state from east to west, a distance of over eight hundred miles; a third is half completed, and a fourth is not improbable. Branch lines, built and projected, gridiron the country north and south, tapping the agricultural, stockraising and mineral belt, abounding in gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, iron and coal, and making accessible to market the mighty forest of timber covering the western slope of the Rocky mountains.

"Power plants, built and building, on our mountain streams are generating electricity for great industrial enterprises and sooner or later will supplant the more expensive method of steam.

"A wonderful awakening of the people to the importance of our waterways bids fair to reestablish navigation upon the upper Missouri and Yellowstone rivers.

"If we omit the condition in certain mineral sections brought about by the temporary suspension of operations in a number of the mines, mills and smelters, the industrial skies in Montana were never brighter nor augured better for the future.

"It is my firm belief that no state in the union possesses more diversified interests, a better climate, a higher standard of citizenship or offers more inducements to the industrious homeseeker than does Montana.

"With these and a multitude of other factors too plentiful to enumerate, combining to promote the material prosperity of this commonwealth, it is not difficult to verify the prediction that within five years our population will have doubled.

"To have served such a people as ours, who have in a generation carved out of the wilderness one of the proudest and most promising states in our great sisterhood, is an honor esteemed beyond the mere words to express. It is my great hope to be able to return to Montana next summer and resume the practice of my profession. If I did not fully expect to return recuperated in health I would not be content to leave until I had exhausted every form of speech at my command in testimony of my appreciation of the devoted friendship and generous forbearance of the good people of this state with whom I have been closely identified for nearly forty years.

(Signed) "J. K. TOOLE."

ROYAL VICTIMS OF ANARCHISTS

King Carlos and the Crown Prince of Portugal Are Slain Without Warning. -- Second Son Slightly Wounded in Melee.

Populace of Lisbon in a State of Terror Bordering on Frenzy. -- Homes and Places of Business Barricaded. -- Dead King Was Generally Popular.

Lisbon, Feb. 1.—King Carlos of Portugal and Crown Prince Louis Philippe were assassinated today and the city is in a state of uproar. The king's second son, the Infant Manuel, was slightly wounded, but Queen Amelia, who strove to save the crown prince's life by throwing herself upon him, was unhurt.

A band of men waiting at the corner of the Praco de Commercio and the Rur de Arsenal suddenly sprang toward the open carriage in which the royal family was driving to the palace and, leveling carbines, which they had concealed upon them, fired. The king and crown prince, upon whom the attack was directed, were each shot three times and they lived only long enough to be carried to the marine arsenal near by, where they expired. Almost at the first shot the king fell back on the cushions dying and at the same moment the crown prince was seen to half rise and then sink back on the seat. Queen Amelia jumped up and threw herself toward the crown prince, in an apparent effort to save his life at the cost of her own, but the prince already had received his death wound. The police guard fired upon the assassins and killed three of them.

The royal family was returning from Villa Vicosa, where it had been sojourning, and was on the way from the railroad station to the palace.

A strong guard was in attendance because of the recent uprising in the city and the discovery of a plot to assassinate Premier Franco and overthrow the monarchy. But the band of murderers had selected the most advantageous spot for the commission of their crime, for they were concealed from the eyes of the party until the vehicle had come into the Praco de Commercio, a large square. Before any of the guards were aware of what was happening the assassins leaped to the carriage and instantly a fusillade of shots rang out. In a moment all was terrible confusion the king and crown prince being shot down without the slightest chance to save themselves. Police guards sprang upon the regicides, the number of whom is somewhat uncertain, and killed three of them and captured three others. One of these committed suicide after being placed in prison. It is charged

I desire to call your special attention to the report of absence and tardiness in the grades in which you may have children. As a whole, these reports are not satisfactory. Can you help us to improve them? The habits of punctuality and regularity in attendance are in themselves worthy of any effort that may be necessary to secure them. They often make a successful man or woman of one who otherwise would have proved a failure.

The student who is a little late to school is very likely to be a little late in everything he undertakes, and the pupil who is absent from school loses not only the work of the day during which he is absent but, because of the loss that day of facts and principles upon which his succeeding work depends, his tasks soon become uninteresting and hard to master, and the result is failure in his work and a dislike for school.

All people interested in the schools are cordially invited to visit them as often as possible. Frequent visits, especially when unexpected by the children, are much to be desired. The grade cards should always receive very careful attention, especially so if you can not visit the schools. It will answer the following questions for you: First, in what study or studies is the pupil most deficient? Second, is the general character of the work improving or getting poorer? Third, is the conduct of the pupil satisfactory?

The amount of home work should be approximately as follows: first that one of the murderers was a Spaniard.

The bodies of the king and crown prince were removed from the marine arsenal in two closed carriages to the royal palace, the late residence of the king, escorted by municipal guards, mounted. An examination of the wounds of the king, who was dead when he reached the arsenal, showed that three bullets had found their mark. One wound was situated at the nape of the neck, a second in the shoulder, and the third, which was the fatal wound, severed the carotoid artery. The crown prince, who was still breathing but who died almost immediately after admission to the arsenal, had suffered three wounds in the head and chest. Two bullets had struck Prince Manuel.

Queen Marie Pia, the mother of King Carlos, the Duke of Oporto, his brother, a number of ministers and court officers hastened to the arsenal when the news reached them of the attack upon the royal family.

The news of the murder swept through the city like wildfire, and tonight half the populace is panic-stricken, not knowing where the next blow may fall. There is the greatest dread for the future of the country, which seems on the verge of being plunged into the awful throes of a revolution, with all the attendant horrors and bloodshed. Throughout the city consternation reigns, and all the houses and business places are barricaded.

The cold-blooded murder has sent a thrill of horror through the country, even among those who have been working politically for the establishment of a republic, and sorrow is expressed on every hand at the dreadful end of the king and the crown prince.

At the first blush it would seem as though the assassination was the work of anarchists and not of republicans. Nevertheless, the stirring events of the last few weeks have prepared the people for some startling culmination. The discovery of plot after plot, as well as the discovery of many secret stores of arms and ammunition, had shown beyond peradventure the existence of a determination on the part of a large body of the Portuguese to overthrow the present conditions and proclaim a republic.
