DECLARED TO BLAME FOR WAR

Shot Twice in His Country Home by Stranger of German Descent.—Neither Wound Fatal and the Injured Man Cared for by His Family.

New York, July 3.—J. P. Morgan was shot twice by an unidentified man, believed to be of German descent, while at his country home at Glencove, L. I., at 9 o'clock this morning.

Two bullets were fired. One glanced from the breast into the arm and the other entered the hip, according to physicians. The wounds are not serious.

The assailant was caught and taken to the court house at Mineola where he said he would be willing to give up his life at any time to end the war.

It was added at the sheriff's office that the man declared Mr. Morgan was responsible for the shipping of arms abroad and that he could stop the conflict if he wished.

Except for the fact that Mr. Morgan had been shot, such members of the family as were in town were without details nearly two hours after the shooting occurred. It was reported that the man had hid in the Morgan country home last night.

The stock market opened irregular and shaded a point, then remained stationary, after the news of the shooting had been confirmed.

Fights With Butler.

It was later learned that the assassin arrived at Glencove on the morning train, hired an automobile, went to the Morgan home, rang the bell and told the butler that he was an old friend of Mr. Morgan. The butler refused to permit the man to enter and the stranger then pressed his pistol to the servant's stomach.

The butler shouted and Mr. Morgan came into the hall and asked what was the matter. A shot rang out in answer, the bullet taking effect in Morgan's hip. The wounded man fell into a chair. The butler hit the assailant with a brass coal hod, but too late to prevent the firing of the second shot.

The butler then overpowered the man and took away his pistol. Servants called the sheriff and a physician and the man was arrested but refused to give his name. A satchel brought by the assassin was found near a hedge. It was filled with dynamite.

Another version of the affair says the man had no trouble in gaining admission to the Morgan house and that he used two revolvers. Mr. Morgan with his wife and daughters went to their country home recently. Martini-cook, the point where the Morgan country residence is located, is almost surrounded by water and is two miles from the village of Glencove.

Late this afternoon the assailant gave his name as Frank Holt and said he was an instructor in German at Cornell university. Mr. Morgan apparently does not consider his wounds serious, as he answered the telephone and said his injuries "did not amount to much."

Justice of the Peace William Luister and Constable Frank McGill took the assailant from the Morgan home to the sheriff's office. The only reply he would give for the time being was, "I am a christian gentleman."

Later the prisoner, who is a tall, lank man, claimed to be an American citizen. Inspired, he said, "from on high," he decided to try to stop the war. He could not be persuaded for some time that he had wounded Morgan, insisting that he did not want to kill or even hurt him, but said he fired so as to frighten the financier.

When told that he had endangered his own life by the act, because he might have killed Morgan, the prisoner said he did not mind that, as he was willing to die as he could not stand the European war any longer.

Court house officials concluded after the examination that the man is not rational. Two suitcases the man had in a taxicab which took him from the station to the Morgan home contained three large sticks of dynamite and a large bottle of nitro-glycerin. There were also two large boxes of cartridges for his revolver.

The terrific blow Holt received from the coal hod caused him to bleed freely and he appeared to be weakening as the day passed, and although he seemed but little hurt at first, he became, or feigned to become, dazed about noon. It is thought possible he may be suffering from a fractured skull. After he was hit by the butler other servants got a rope and tied him fast until Constable McGill arrived.

GOVERNOR STEWART IS GUEST AT BIG DEMOCRATIC BANQUET

Chief Executive Pays Glowing Tribute To Hospitable and Progressive People of Billings and Speaks of City's Inspiring Growth.

Governor S. V. Stewart and Attorney General J. B. Poindexter must have felt highly gratified with the reception which was tendered them in Billings yesterday. All day the distinguished gentlemen were the center of a group of citizens who represented every shade of political belief and who were at pains to show that Billings was truly, sincerely glad to have the governor and the state's chief law officer as guests.

The climax of the day's splendid display of hospitality came last night when Governor Stewart and Mr. Poindexter were guests of the local Democracy at a banquet given at the Grand hotel.

It was an inspiring event. The affair was most intelligently conducted. It was hospitable, sensible, enjoyable. The banquet was a dandy; the service was good, and on every hand were evidences of good will and enjoyment. The program was just right. There were no long-winded speeches and only a few speakers. They talked entertainingly and instructively.

Introduced by Hogan.

State Senator T. S. Hogan, one of the most useful and able men that ever represented Yellowstone county in either branch of the legislature, introduced Governor Stewart, and in doing so took occasion to say that by reason of his clean private and public life, his genial, democratic manners, his bigness of heart and brain and his splendid capacity to intelligently and fearlessly handle public questions, Gov. Samuel V. Stewart has taken high place with the public men of the nation and occupies in Montana the enviable position of being admired by all classes of citizens.

Response by Governor.

Governor Stewart made a splendid response. He paid glowing tribute to the hospitable and progressive people of Billings. He spoke of the inspiring growth of this city and commented eloquently upon the great work which the citizens are daily doing for the general betterment not only of Billings but of the whole state of Montana.

Turning to national subjects, the governor spoke briefly of the great accomplishments of President Wilson and the Democratic government at Washington.

"Subsequent events have proved that the days of the last national Democratic convention in Baltimore were among the most momentous in the history of America," he said. "Though the country did not know it then, the course of its entire future history hung in the balance as the candidate for president was selected. That Woodrow Wilson was chosen, that it has been his firm hand, and no other, that guided the ship of state through the tortuous channel through which it has been forced to go since the European war was started, is ground for congratulation, not only for all Democrats, but for every man, woman and child in the United States."

Thomas Arthur, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, who arranged the banquet and had entire charge of Governor Stewart's entertainment while in Billings, concluded last night's event with a few well chosen words, thanking the Democrats and the people of Billings for the welcome given the distinguished visitors.

Governor Stewart and Attorney General Poindexter left for Missoula at 12:20 o'clock this morning.

Among those who attended the banquet were: Samuel V. Stewart, governor; J. B. Poindexter, attorney general; J. M. Kennedy, state commissioner of agriculture and publicity; John Kuhl, ex-senator of the Nebraska legislature; Thomas Arthur, chairman Democratic state central committee; A. H. Bowman, chairman Big Horn county board of commissioners; T. C. Armitage, postmaster; Rev. J. Phillip Anshutz, Dr. Mott H. Arnold, Dr. J. D. Barrett, G. E. Berg, Dr. Frank Carll, County Attorney J. L.
