SUNBEAMS.

Billy Devine has gone to Helena.
Wild cherries are very plentiful this fall.
Maiden is jubilant. She is to have a smelter.
Ira Brown came in from Dupuyer creek Saturday.
A. Spaulding, of Choteau, was in town one day this week.
The Montana Wool Grower will soon be issued monthly.
Charles Holt and wife were in from Shergold last week.
J. L. Perkins, of Ullida, paid us a flying visit last Monday.
Chickens are said to be very plentiful over on the Missouri.
Mrs. John Devine has gone to Helena to visit friends in that city.
The Montana Wool Growers' Association numbers about 75 members.
The printer made us say Geo. Barres for Geo. Barron in this week's issue.
W. E. Hagar, of Hagar & Atherton Dupuyer wool growers, was in town last week.
There is talk of running an independent candidate for road supervisor in this precinct.
The north side round-up started out on Wednesday. They will begin operations on the North Fork.
Go to J. H. McKnight & Co. for furniture, heating and cooking stoves, tinware and house furnishing goods.
William Crispen arrived from Augusta Monday with an outfit to begin the fall horse round-up on this range.
The Republican delegates to this precinct to the Helena convention left for that city Monday by private conveyance.
J. H. McKnight & Co. are in receipt of a lot of fresh meats and groceries. Call and get prices before purchasing elsewhere.
The Sun River flouring mill is ready for the new wheat crop. It is expected to turn out better flour this year than ever before.
Wm. Best, our saddler, has closed his shop in this town and returned to Helena. The boys will miss Will and his energetic laugh very much.
Kisselburgh, Carter & Co.'s lumber is universally acknowledged to be the best that comes to this market and is sold straight through for $35 per M.
The Benton Record says "If anybody asks you which side of the split the Record is on tell 'em you don't know." The Record is evidently on the partition.
Dyas & Corson have re-arranged their blacksmith and wagon shop, the forges and blacksmith department now being in front and the wheelwright shop behind.
Go to J. H. McKnight & Co.'s for Woods' Enclosed Gear Mowers and Self-Binding Harvesters of the latest improved pattern, Sulky Rakes, Barbed Wire and all kinds of Farming Implements.
Jesse Armitage, of Helena, has just opened his fair invoice of elegant and artistic jewelry, watches, clocks and silverware. He has also increased his repairing facilities. Jesse is the boss watch repairer of the Territory.
J. M. Powers, superintendent of the Helena & Benton Stage Company, arrived in the city from Benton Monday and went on to Helena. D. H. Churchill, our next sheriff, accompanied him from here.
The Montana Wool Grower has a sketch entitled "The Gentle Shepherd and the Shearer" that will recall some hour of every wool grower's life in Montana. Brother Peck don't write that article from hearsay. He has been there himself without doubt.
We call attention to the advertisement of J. R. Drew & Co. in this issue. Messrs. Carroll & Drew, the members of the new firm, are well known in this section and much esteemed. In advertising in the Sun they make a bid for a share of the boot and shoe trade of the northern portion of Montana, to which their many friends residing in these valleys will gladly respond.
Volume one No. 1 of the Montana Wool Grower published by the River Press Publishing Company, Benton, and edited by L. W. Peck, has reached us. We compliment the editor on its literary merit as an organ of the wool growing industry of Montana and the publishers on the neatness and beauty of its typographical appearance. The editor's greeting "Ban" will find an echo in the tender heart of every Montana shepherd. The Montana Wool Grower deserves the cordial support of every man who is, or expects to be engaged in the sheep business. The Sun welcomes the new journal and wishes it great and abundant success and financial prosperity.

Choteau County Democratic Convention.

The Democratic convention of Choteau county held at Benton on the 18th inst. resulted in a split and two conventions were organized to proceed with the business of the day. The rival bodies were styled the upper and lower houses. Their organizations were as follows:

THE LOWER HOUSE
organized by the election of Paris Gibson temporary chairman and R. A. Luke secretary. On motion the following committees were appointed:

On order of business—T. E. Collins, H. R. Buck, W. F. Rector, Robert Blankenbaker, and J. C. Adams.

Public Administrator—L. F. LaCroix.
County Surveyor—Walter W. DeLacy.
Coroner—Napoleon Salvaile.

"I'm a Republican, I Am."
While the Republican primary the other night was preparing to vote for road supervisor an aged man with hoary head and wrinkled features and perhaps the slightest suspicion of primary whisky concealed about his person meandered into the presence of that august body of American citizens, stumbling over the extended legs of a candidate for constable and knocking a half smoked cigar from the mouth of aspirant for coroner, saying as he at last gained a central position, "I'm Republican, I am. I beg your pardon for disturbing ye, but I'm a Republican from my cradle, that's what I am. I don't belong in this precinct, but I reckon I have a right to vote for delegate, and that are is what I'm going to do, and don't you forget it. As I said afore, I'm a Republican and I'm going to vote right here for Botkin. That's the kind of a fish I am." But this is only a primary, Mister, said the man who was running for constable. "Different here, young feller. I'm going to vote for Botkin whether this year meeting is a lexion or a funeral. Mister will you give me a piece of paper?" said he, addressing the secretary of the meeting. He was accommodated and proceeded to write the name of Botkin on the strip. Just then the chairman declared the ballot closed, and the man from Choteau will hold his vote in readiness for November.

DEARBORN ITEMS.
The Dearborn hotel has re-opened, Mr. Charles Rudolph being the proprietor. He has given it a thorough renovation from cellar to attic, and is now prepared to receive calls from all those who are rounding and weary. He will give you plenty to eat and a good place to sleep. New married couple, new house—everything new; "a new broom sweeps clean." Try him a round, boys, and see how you like it.
Hon. W. G. Gillette returned home from Helena last Monday.
School is running regular, and has an attendance of fifteen scholars and there are several others that are going to commence in a few days.
Mrs. H. A. Wilot is contemplating a trip to Canada to visit her old homestead once again.
Mr. W. L. Nichols is building a fine stone barn, which, when completed will be a credit to this community.
Mr. H. A. Milot is cogitating over erecting a fine saloon 24x30, for the benefit of the poor. A poor man can go in with a dollar, get four drinks and come out feeling worth a million.
Chas. L. Lahrncroft is burning lime and harvesting his grain.
Hon. E. Ballou returned home from a trip to the Blackfoot Agency last Monday. His reports of the manner in which the Indians have heretofore been treated are not very favorable.
Fifteen thousand head of sheep passed here last week en route to Sun River and Marías.
A tall, hungry-looking fellow walked into our sanctum the other day and without waiting for an invitation jumped up into the air, popped his heels together and struck the floor like a thousand bricks, exclaiming, burrah! for burrah!

"Well," says the editor, what are you hurrahing for?"
"Are you the Republican candidate for Delegate in Congress?"
"No, I'm a gentleman."
"Well, I didn't say you wasn't; but what are you doing?"
"I'm writing campaign speeches for Blaine."
"Well, s-a-y, couldn't you throw in a little towards building an asylum for sheep-herders?"
"Not this year. We've got too tight a sale."
And then the industrious editor went on writing a receipt for killing rats.

We are pleased to announce the marriage of Miss Emma Sperling and Mr. Geo. Palmer. They are highly respected by all who know them, and are vouchsafed the blessings of many friend in their new relation. We take pleasure in welcoming them back among us, and hope no cloud of sorrow shall ever darken their field of joy. They are going to run the Flat Creek hotel this coming year.

N. QUAD.
CHESTNUT ITEMS.
SEPTEMBER 23d, 1884.
Everything quiet.
Business is dull and items scarce.
Everything in nature points to death and decay.
Mrs. Perkins did not start east, as expected. She will wait now till her "hubby" is ready.
Toul Gorham, "Uncle" Moore, Sheehy, Brown and Sweetland, of the west side, have threshed. Mr. Schemmerach did the work.
Tom Gorham will thresh this week.
The elastic book-keeper, Wells, of Sun River, is in the store while Tom is gone. Look out for a dun now.
We understand that there are twenty-three scholars enrolled in the school.
We hear that the widow (?) Largent had twenty-one chickens killed, one night last week, by coyotes.
The N. P. surveyors are with us now looking up and making corner stones to their lands.
Dan Boone, a relative of old Daniel Boone of Kentucky, was down from Dearborn and vicinity last week. He is on a big hunt. He has gone up on the north fork of Sun River to be gone a month or six weeks when he will return here to winter. He is a jolly old man.

Catechism.
There was a man, and he had a cat—a little black Thomas Cat, and there was a poor printer, who had no cat all nor even the semblance of a feline. But the poor printer had a great big, round dollar, his all; alas! poor, poor printer!
And there was a little boy, a smart young America, a speculative little urchin, who personally addressed the poor (always remembered) printer, "If you give me your bright, new, genuine silver dollar I will give you a cat—a nice, black cat, a reliable cat, with steady and cleanly habits. And the poor pondered much, for behold! it was his last bright, new, genuine silver dollar; but, being endowed with an undying hope he acquiesced.
For the mice did devour the substance of the poor printer. They builded nests and reared their young in his garments, and did otherwise grievously annoy him.
And the poor printer said to the smart little boy, the speculative little boy, "Inasmuch as the mice do destroy my wealth and do build habitations in my habiliments, therefore I will give unto you my last, bright, new, genuine silver dollar, on whose opposite side is stamped the features of a girl in Vermont, and on the near side the eagle-bird, and the legend "In God we trust," to be yours to keep and to hold for better or for worse for all time.
And the printer wept.
And the smart little boy—the speculative little boy, said,
"It's a whack."
And he went straightway out into the highways and by-ways and did capture a small black cat.
And he did bring it unto the poor, old printer, and did warrant the cat to be a good cat, a nice, active, reliable cat, of excellent moral character.
Not given to nightly revels and cleanly and pure in its habits and sedate and unassuming in its ways, the poor printer took that last, bright, new, dollar from his pocket and gave it to the smart little boy, the speculative little boy.
And the cat became the printer's cat.
CHAPTER II.
And the poor printer had no cause for sorrow or regret, because he had parted with his hard-earned wealth, and he smote audibly at the frolicsome antics of his dollar-cat. For, behold! it was very young and full of youthful feline life. Yet, as the day wore on, the smile faded from his countenance and a dark cloud of doubt and distrust settled down upon him. Jasper, (the poor printer named his dollar cat Jasper) in his youthful exuberance, mistaking the poor printer's legs for wooden poles, assayed to climb them, and in so doing, sank his claws deeply into scant flesh of the poor man. Loud, indeed was the howl of agony that resounded through the print shop, and Jasper, greatly scared, sprang from the lacerated limbs of the printer onto the form which leaned against the off leg of the imposing stone, and pled it; then he sprang onto the edge of the ink keg and fell into its black depths; from there he walked into the stock closet and quickly emerged with a few hundred quarter sheet bills and a bunch or two of envelopes clutched to his lanky sides and tail; another spring, and he landed on the imposing stone and gathered up a patent medicine ad, and an editorial on the advisability of electing L. S. Wells our representative from this end of the county, rolling from there to the floor, he crawled to the sanctum and climbed up into the copy drawer and laid down on a pile of MSS which was intended to mould public opinion as to who should be our next road supervisor; and then the poor printer having come to himself, captured the little black cat and carried it with his head of literary matter to the sink, where he was cleansed with concentrated lye and a type brush. Then he shut him up in a box and placed the box near the stove until its inmate would dry. And the printer did work for four long nights, and did throw in the form that was pled, and reset the patent medicine ad. But the MSS was lost to the world forever. And the cat pursued the erratic tenor of its ways, until one day the man who had a little black Thomas cat came unto the print shop and he looked upon Jasper as an old friend and said, "Where did you get my little black Thomas cat?"

And the poor printer said "Is that your cat?" and the man said "let your life." And the printer said he paid one bright, new, genuine silver dollar for that cat to a smart little boy, a speculative little boy. And the man said with great energy, "It's my cat. I had it with me in my infancy and now in its youthful cathood I will not be despoiled of it." And he gathered the little black Thomas cat up into his arms and bore it away, and the poor printer said to him never a word, but resolved with a cast iron resolve to kill that smart little boy, that speculative little boy.
