MARCUS WHITMAN'S RIDE.

How the Great Northwest was Snatched from the Clutches of the Hudson Bay Company.

In 1836, Dr. Marcus Whitman and his partner, Spaulding, with their wives, went to Oregon under the auspices of the American Board.

But what of the treaty? It had been signed and proclaimed as the law of the land two months before he had set out, and ratified while he was lost in the mountains.

Prior to 1842 the United States and England were in joint occupation of the Oregon region.

It was generally understood that the country would be English or American, according to the tide of emigration.

Dr. Whitman was called on a professional errand to Fort Walla Walla, twenty-five miles from his home.

Tables were spread for the feast, at which the doctor found himself a solitary American.

"Hurray for Oregon! America is too late; we have got the country!" The doctor excused himself at the earliest possible moment.

In less than twenty-four hours he was in the saddle, galloping for "Washington and Webster."

"Washington and Webster. Home and wife behind him, winter and 4,000 miles before him!"

With a pack on his back, through Fort Hall, whose jealous commandant would have been glad to have detained him.

There followed him into that splendid valley, in little companies and in long, weary file, jaded and battered.

There followed him into that splendid valley, in little companies and in long, weary file, jaded and battered.

At Lonesome Ledge.

According to my memory, the story which an old miner told me at the Grand Pacific the other day was this:

"We had put up the cabin that was to be home to us away up on the Yellowstone, and it was in those times away out of sight of civilization."

"All but one. He was a young chap that we picked up on our way out. He had his hair as yellow as my hands, and a kind of stoop in his shoulders."

"He had every other we never knewed it, and we didn't know whether Brixie war his front name or his back name and we never axed him."

"One night we saw him wash his face and comb his hair. He had some trouble to get it to lay down, but he got it. Then he put some b'ar lye on his boots, and then he took his coat and bent it again a cedar that was 'bout as frail as he war."

Adventure With a Huge Buffalo.

I had singled out as my meat an old bull with long, highly polished horns and the most magnificent mane that has ever come under my notice.

It is now in evidence from his own published letters that the man who wrote "Richelieu" and "The Cartons" also addressed his young wife as "My Adored Poodle," and at the end of a mess of the supremest ash vey properly signed himself "Your Idolatrous Pappy."

Mr. Happenberger finished lately at Munich the figures of the Garfield monument to be erected at San Francisco. The figure of Garfield is ten feet in height and is a likeness in the matter of features; the other figure, an ideal of Columbia, represents a woman seated at the foot of the statue.

A remarkable wedding party is to be held in Missouri. Twenty-one couples from the northern counties of the State have agreed to get married at the same time and place.

More gold fields are reported to have been discovered on the Russo-Chinese frontier of the Amoor, twelve miles from the frontier on the Chinese side; and the Russians, who have complained so much of the invasion of their own side by the Chinese, are now swarming over to the new Chinese El Dorado.

In 1860 the great iron and cannon founding establishment of Herr Krupp at Essen contained 1,764 workmen; in 1870 the number had increased to 7,084, and at the present time it is over 20,000; if, also, the women and children dependent on the establishment are included, a population of 65,381 is gathered together.

"As you are in art," said Gonnod to a young poet, "you will judge the great masters of the past as I now judge the great musicians of former times. At your age I used to say 'Tart' at 25 I said 'I and Mozart'; at 40, 'Mozart and I'; now I say 'Mozart.' The experience of Gonnod is very much the same as that of other men."

An escaped black tiger from Robinson's circus is now roaming at large in Princess Anne county, Virginia. An old darkey met the tiger on a bridge about dusk, and taking the animal for a dog proceeded to give it a kick, when he discovered his mistake, and with a yell that was heard in four counties, jumped into the river and made his escape.

During his stay in this country, Mr. Mozoomdar said that, according to Hindoo custom, he had no part or lot in choosing his wife. He did not see her until he married her. He added, with much warmth: "If I were to have all the world to choose from to-day, I should choose her." Mr. Mozoomdar also affirmed that the majority of marriages made on the Hindoo plan are happy ones.

The Oxford press is about to effect a revolution in the Book of Common Prayer. It proposes to issue a Sunday Service Book of the Church of England, the object of which is "not to change a sentence or even a syllable of any of the services; it will add nothing but perspicuity of form, it will subtract nothing but confusion of order;" and further, it is anticipated "it will tend to popularize and utilize the Book of Common Prayer amongst the masses."

The surprising information is given by a detective that there is no better place to look for criminals than in a reading room. In order to keep posted with criminal news the thieves carefully scan the files of daily newspapers of the large cities. Once an important arrest of a jewelry thief was made in this way: A man who spent several days in reading an account of a jewelry robbery appeared so interested that he was arrested and found to be guilty.

Out driving near Killarney a short time ago the Earl of Kinnaird found by the roadside a destitute family that had been evicted from their cabin on his estate by one of his agents. He had not heard of their eviction before, and on learning of their condition from their own lips, he had them conduct him to their late home. There he tore down the notice of dispossession, broke open the door with a hatchet, and told them to re-enter and live there, assured that they would not be disturbed again.

The Georgia papers report that sharpshooters are going over the track of Sherman's march to the sea, gulling farmers into the belief that the government is going to pay for the damage done at that time, and collecting fees in advance for services to be rendered in putting through claims.

Sympathizing With Vanderbilt. I learn with much sadness that Mr. Wm. H. Vanderbilt's once princely fortune has shriveled down to $150,000,000. This piece of information comes to me like a clap of thunder out of a clear sky.

In conclusion, I don't know what to say, unless it be to appeal to the newspaper men of the country in Mr. Vanderbilt's behalf. While he was wealthy he was proud and arrogant. He said: "Let the newspapers be blanketed, blanked to blank," or words to that effect, but we do not care for that. Let us forget all that and remember that his sad fate may some day be our own.

That thieves are sometimes ingenious in other crafts besides their own has just been proved at Karlsruhe, in Bohemia, where a young man serving a term of five years' imprisonment for robbery has, without the aid of a single tool, constructed a watch which will go for six hours without winding up. It consists of morsels of thread and straw, two needles, a pin and a piece of paper for the dial plate.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Dr. Deschamps says that the microbe of scarlet fever is shaped like a hair with a swelling on one end. It reproduces rapidly, but is easy killed by any disinfectant.

Toussy fled from North Wales, says the New York World, because he was asked to preside at the National Ecsteddof at Llangwellydangloedloed, and he feared he would be compelled to pronounce both words on taking the chair, so he took leave instead.
