More desks for the school. James Hennepsey was in town several days this week. The school is progressing finely, with a good attendance.

WANTED!

A Location for a Woolen Mill. LINDSEY, ORE., Aug. 23, 1885. Editor of Northwest Magazine:

Knowing you take great interest in all that refers to the Northern Pacific Railroad and connections and are well posted thereon, I write you for information.

Geo. D. Patterson, a well-known and successful wool-grower of Shonkin creek, was in town this week.

The Chouteau County Teachers' Institute was in session at Benton Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Henry A. Fry will give a dance in his new building, Friday evening, November 6th. A pleasant time is anticipated.

Joe Deeper has one of Job's large-sized, all-wool and a yard wide, comforters on his head. He is nursing it tenderly.

Mr. Largent regrets that circumstances were such as to make it almost impossible for him to attend the Institute at Benton this week.

Robert Vaughn, this week, mowed the second crop of hay from a meadow on his Sun River ranch. It is not every country of hay from a meadow in one season.

Ed. Canary is having stone hauled for his building on Central avenue, which will be 40x50. When completed this building will present a fine appearance.

Charley Berkley, one of the principals in the recent Sun River arrangement, is said to have headed for the Pan Handle in Texas, instead of for Canada, as stated in last week's TRIBUNE.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ORGANIZED.

At the above date there was organized a Sunday school at Great Falls, with the following officers and teachers:

Superintendent—Silas Beachly. Assistant Supt.—S. S. Whitler. Secretary and Treas.—Albert Strong.

Librarian—H. O. Chouven. Rev. Largent, teacher of Bible class; Mrs. Silas Beachly, teacher of class of little girls; Mrs. Largent, teacher of class of boys.

The hour decided on for Sunday school was half past two. Let all turn out and make the S. S. a success.

PROFIT ON WHEAT RAISING.

Jos. Paul, living six miles northwest of town, had in one hundred and sixty acres of wheat this season, which yielded nearly thirty-one bushels to the acre.

Forty-eight cents per bushel, or 80 cts. per 100 lbs., seems like an insignificant sum to pay for wheat, but if a profit of $7 per acre can be made in Washington Territory selling wheat at that price, a much larger profit can be made in Montana.

A fire broke out on the prairie about seven miles above Fort Shaw one day last week, and a severe gale blowing at the time drove the fiery element toward the post at a lively rate.

B. S. Fitzpatrick arrived in town last Monday from the Sweet Grass Hills, where he has been mining the past two months, and was on his way back to Nebraska to do his representation work on his mining interests in that camp.

Exchange: At a Montana hotel table last summer an English traveler deposited his dusty cap beside the plate of his neighbor, a gentleman from St. Paul.

CAPITAL CULLINGS.

HELENA, MONT., Oct. 26, 1885. Editor of the TRIBUNE:—Some time in the far past I rashly promised to write you a letter, but these splendid days that we enjoy are not conducive to raising the requisite amount of energy.

The President has sent in a batch of appointments lately for this Territory. There is some disappointment, because Montana have not been chosen in all cases.

Considerable amusement is felt at the chagrin manifested by a certain set in Choteau county which has failed of notice. Political wise men say let Choteau county put forward its good men for these offices and it will be recognized, but these everlasting candidates who could not get elected to an office in their own county should not be expected to get an appointment.

The Montana History is out and the agents are having some trouble in getting copies taken. The engravings are said to be execrable.

Great Falls is attracting considerable attention. Every business man who has been there, returns with glowing accounts of its beauty of situation and fertility of resources.

John B. Wilson, who made a half million in Pennsylvania coal and iron, says the Sand Coulee coal is the finest he has seen outside of Pennsylvania.

The Teachers' Institute has been in session for a week, and at our boarding place we have heard nothing but the "toots" of the school ma'ams.

Gov. Safford, of Arizona, was a man well qualified for the position; active and industrious, full of energy and zeal, he at all times availed himself of all the power and privilege vested in him to protect the citizens in every right.

At the meeting of the Montana Pioneers held at Helena August 28, 1885, it was unanimously voted that each one who had signed the roll of Pioneers, and every one entitled so to do, should be requested to furnish the corresponding secretary, during the coming year, a brief sketch of his life for the purpose of making up a "Pioneers' Record," similar to that of California, and that all the newspapers of Montana be requested to publish this notice for three months and aid in the accomplishment of this enterprise.

The sketch should contain at least the date and place of birth, the date, route and means of conveyance in coming to Montana, place of residence since coming, occupation and most important events during such residence, with any additional matters the writer may wish to make.

Many of the pioneers are dead, and it is earnestly desired that some friend may supply the record for such ones.

THE INDIAN QUESTION.

Work on the new court house here is progressing. There has not been so much building here this year as hitherto, and business men say that building is overdone and predict a tumble in real estate and rents. There are many vacant houses and rooms now, but Helena enterprise is yet active.

THE INDIAN QUESTION.

The Apaches are fully posted in regard to the protection afforded them, and go in pursuit of booty and plunder and return without let or hindrance. The facilities afforded by the boundary line between the United States and Mexico is very advantageous to the Apaches in all their depredations as to entry and exit. With few, if any, exceptions, the efforts made to overcome the Apache Indians have been of a spasmodic nature, and consequently most futile.

The remedy—the only true, safe and efficient remedy for the Apaches will be extermination. The tribe of Indians, or conglomeration of all tribes, have been so long accustomed to having their own way, in a large field, killing and robbing with impunity, that any attempt to prevent them now is a deprivation of right.

It is a poor commentary on the greatest country and strongest government in the entire world, that at the present day, and with the aid of railroads, two or three hundred marauding vagabonds can render life and property unsafe in a large section of our common country and be a permanent menace to travel, commerce and intercourse with our citizens.

There is a ray of light, however, in the distance, in the concentration of military posts, abandoning those that are useless and placing the troops where they can be of use to the public service. Were it to take 5,000 soldiers for one year to make peace permanent in Arizona and ensure full and ample protection to life and property along its boundaries, the work ought to be done, and done effectually.

The adoption of such a measure would effect a large saving in life and property and inspire confidence in the general public and materially aid in the development of the many resources of that Territory. It would at the same time guarantee law and order, and afford free travel on the public roads and highways of that country.

It would also be a great measure banish from the minds of the people the superstitious and wretched make shifts incident to giving adequate protection to every citizen in that Territory, and also banish from the minds of the people the superstitious and wretched make shifts incident to giving adequate protection to every citizen in that Territory.

Gov. Safford, of Arizona, was a man well qualified for the position; active and industrious, full of energy and zeal, he at all times availed himself of all the power and privilege vested in him to protect the citizens in every right.

Arms and ammunition were supplied in abundance to the ranchmen and residents of the Territory to place them in a position to defend themselves as best they could. The life of the rancher was one of continual dread of expectant danger.

Those living in remote sections applied to General Crooke for protection, which was given in every instance, where any soldiers could be spared for any length of time. The writer being at the time in the U.S. army, was detailed with a few others to Gardner's Ranch, in the Santa valley, some twenty miles or so from the Mexican line.

This fruitful valley was the favored place for pillage and plunder. Every week the Apaches came down on old Tom Gardner, shooting his men while plowing or at other work, and running off his stock.

On several occasions the entire band came within a few miles of old Camp Crittenden. There was one company—F, Fifth cavalry—stationed there, and these gallant fellows won for themselves well-merited praise wherever duty called them. The horses were hobbled in front of the post, and it became kind of risky for anyone to venture beyond its limits.

While on detached duty at Gardner's Ranch the Indians in force showed up near the post, running off the stock of the post trader. A Mexican rushed wildly to the commanding officer, Lieut. Wm. P. Hall, one of the most fearless and plucky officers that ever came from old Virginia.

As a matter of course when the soldiers arrived the Indians fell back to the security afforded by the mountains, except in case they found themselves superior in force and sufficient to become the assailants, disappearing for a time to appear at some place wholly unexpected. On such occasions the ranchers found "eternal vigilance" to mean life and liberty; and the commanding officer duly notified outposts of the Apaches being out in force, we all knew what that meant.

On one occasion six mounted men came to Gardner's Ranch to notify us that the dreaded enemy was abroad. Having remained some time, they started for the post, receiving from old Tom the most impressive caution to keep a sharp lookout when near Castle Blanca, an old and long abandoned adobe structure, but which in early days stood many a seige from prowling bands of savages. It was in vain to make further effort to prevail on the boys of the well known Fifth. Boots and saddles, and they were off. It was their last ride. When nearing Castle Blanca they were attacked by a strong force of Indians who were in ambush entirely out of sight and protected by a ditch formed by the heavy rains. Arriving on the ground immediately afterward, we found the horses dead in the road and five soldiers killed, Sergeant Stuart fearfully mutilated. Out of the party one escaped, hatless and with several bullet hole marks on his clothing. He arrived at the post to tell the story.

A few days afterward our party at the ranch was attacked, or rather we were the assailants. A number of Victoria's band attempted to run off the horses and a few cows. While doing so, they were surprised. At three different points they were met by volleys of musketry, causing them to run for safety to a field of green corn, where it would be dangerous to follow. Shortly afterward the same party attacked Brown's ranch, a mile or so further down the valley, and killed the husband while at dinner. The poor woman fled in the direction of Gardner's, being wounded in several places. She fortunately fell into a small party of soldiers hastening to the scene, and was carried in a state of insensibility into Mrs. Gardner's care. The Indians disappeared further down the valley. Some Mexicans were found dead, killed by Indians. It appeared to be the custom of the Mexicans, or Greasers as they are called, when pursued by Indians to throw away their guns, vainly imagining that was all the savages wanted. In every case the Apaches killed them with the weapons thrown away.
