

GREAT FALLS A CANDIDATE.

In the great free-for-all capital race next year Great Falls has announced herself as a candidate. She does this with the firm conviction that in view of her natural and acquired advantages the capital of the state should be located within her limits.

It is nearer the center of Montana than any other city in it. It is easy of access from every point of the compass. It is on the line of a great transcontinental thoroughfare.

Coming to the question of population it will have by the time the state buildings can be completed a larger population than Helena and three or four times that of Bozeman.

GOOD RACING ASSURED.

By the time the fall meeting takes place at this city the Northern Montana Fair association will have one of the best equipped race courses in the state.

As an event which vitally concerns one of the prominent interests in northern Montana the meeting should be encouraged by every admirer of fine horses.

WHAT does Great Falls think of Butte for the capital? Inter Mountain. Butte is all right. Many worse places than Butte could be found for the capital, but the TRIBUNE feels persuaded that the greatest mining camp in the world will gratefully yield her claims to those of the cataract city.

It is said that the real reason why President Gordon postponed the meeting of the Montana Press association at Butte from the 10th of next month to the 3d of September was to give Gen. Warren further time in which to complete his air-ship, which is promised to be in working order by that time.

We have Mr. Carter's word for it that "the kindest possible feeling exists throughout Montana toward the president, and this kindly feeling is not interfered with by party lines."

MORE OF APPLETON'S REASONS.

The closer one reviews Mr. Appleton's reasons why Helena should have the earth, the more one becomes impressed with the inexhaustible possibilities a man enjoys of making a fool of himself.

Again, says Mr. Appleton, "we are about to start a large iron industry that in two years will employ 500 men." The gentleman could as truthfully add: "We are about to start a silk industry which will require 500 men to plant and cultivate mulberry trees; therefore give us the college."

Reason No. 10 recites that Helena has a great many schools and employs a large number of teachers. These schools, says the learned Appleton "draw many 'scholars'—not pupils—hence Helena should have the college.

Reason No. 14 indicates that Mr. Appleton is an artistic boomer in the real estate business. The way he slides the figures up on outside acre property makes a man dizzy to look at them, and makes him smile too when he thinks of the 300 vacant houses in the city of Helena, nutely asking for tenants.

"What fools these mortals be." Now, if Mr. Appleton had not been consumed by an overweening desire to become famous among his Helena neighbors and had refrained from monkeying with a newspaper man, he would not have advertised himself to the intelligent people of Montana as a vain, foolish man, a murderer of the king's English, a disciple of Munchausen and a deadly enemy to Helena.

And now comes Mr. Wanamaker saying he has enough of it. He will lay down the robes of office when Harrison's term expires and retire to his Philadelphia junk store, and "nothing," he says, "will induce me to take this or any other cabinet office again."

It would appear that ex-Senator Ingalls now places a money value upon his words. He absolutely refuses to talk to newspaper men unless he be paid for it. It is hoped Mr. Ingalls will remain firm in his resolve. He is a back number and therefore out of date.

INGALLS GIVES ADVICE.

Ex-Senator Ingalls having abandoned the role of the politician and assumed that of the sage, proceeds to read a lecture to a few Kansas editors upon the outlook for the republican party. Among other things he said was that: "Republicanism of the future must readjust itself to the changed conditions of American life or it will perish."

And now Mr. Ingalls warns his party to readjust itself to the changed conditions of American life or it will perish. If his words bear a meaning they mean that the republican party must abandon its present high protection, anti-silver, and extravagant governmental policy, and adjust itself to the necessities of the present.

He predicts Harrison will be renominated and Cleveland will be his antagonist. If his party has the courage to adjust itself to the present condition of the country he prophesies success, but he adds: "If we dicker with popular errors, compromise with unprincipled leaders and sneer at honest differences of judgment and opinion it will be a Waterloo."

A MAGNIFICENT BONUS.

That is a magnificent bonus the last legislative assembly proposes to give to the first raiser of 1,000,000 pounds of sugar beets grown in the state. In Nebraska and Kansas sugar beets bring $4.50 a ton delivered at the nearest railroad station.

Mr. Russell B. Harrison has a dangerous mouth—to his father. The young man possesses the unhappy faculty of saying what he ought not to say, and of saying it when he should remain silent. It was not in good form for Russell B. to tell that Chicago crowd at the Auditorium hotel that his father would not be a candidate in 1892 unless his party demand it.

The Helena Independent scooped all of its state contemporaries last Sunday morning with a column obituary of Sir John McDonald. There is nothing like newspaper enterprise, but it trends upon a doubtful field when it forces the life out of a man who was still alive last night.

Mr. John Caragher, a merchant at Caragher, Fulton county, Ohio, says that St. Patrick's Pills are the best selling pills he handles. The reason is that they produce a pleasant cathartic effect and are certain and thorough in their action.

THE REV. BELL EXPLAINS.

And now appears the Rev. W. S. Bell with a letter in the Helena Independent, throwing additional light upon the contest for the site of the Congregational college. Mr. Bell lives in Helena, but it appears that owing to his official position in the church he was supposed to represent the state as a whole upon the committee.

The Reverend gentleman says that when he found that Helena could get but five votes of the seven necessary for a choice, while Great Falls could get six he voted for the latter place, but adds: "At no time was my vote withheld from Helena when there seemed any prospect of her securing the prize."

But it seems the "obstinate juror"—the man who knew he was right and that all the others were wrong—was on the committee. He was also one of a number who was supposed to represent the state at large.

GREAT FALLS SHOUTING.

Amid the general rejoicing throughout the state over the prospects for the miner, stockman and farmer, Great Falls has struck the highest note. No city or town in Montana will be more benefited by the favoring elements than this city.

Large lumbering enterprises are materializing, while the demands for the outputs bid fair to test their utmost capacity. The wool clip which will be marketed here promises to be much larger than that of any former year and shipments of stock to increase in proportion.

As TODAY is a legal holiday and the TRIBUNE staff desires to enter into and take part in those exercises which distinguish the 30th of May from the ordinary day of the year, no paper will be issued from this office to-morrow.

MISSIONARY INFORMATION.

Missionary information, prepared expressly for this paper, by Rev. J. H. Little, District Secretary, Great Falls District, Montana Conference.

How Can the Missionary Cause be Helped?

It is strange that there are so many professing Christian people in the world, who are quite indifferent to the subject of missions. In a general way they claim to be interested in all the work of the church to which they belong; they desire to see the services well attended; they make special efforts to pay their minister the amount that they agree to, and they are always willing to help in any work for the good of their own local church.

Let me by way of suggestion, present for your consideration, several ways in which you can help along the cause. First—Think about it often. We become more interested in the things that we think of the oftenest.

Second—Pray for the cause of missions. Remember what God has done for you, then think of the vast multitudes who are living without God, and without hope in the world.

Third—Give as you are able. This is the Gospel standard. Not as your neighbor gives, for he may not be awake to his duty. Not as you have given in the past, because you may not have been alive to your opportunities, but as you are able.

Fourth—Talk about missions. Introduce the subject wherever you can without boring people and making your company undesirable. Kindly and lovingly plead for the ignorant, enlist the sympathy of those who would have helped long ago if they had known the need of it.

By carrying out these suggestions, the cause of missions will receive such an impetus that it can not be easily resisted and every person thus helping will realize the truth as contained in the words of Jesus. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."
