The court gave him 48 hours to make up his mind on this point.

SOME GHASTLY RELICS FOUND.

A Skull Dug Up in a Sewer Connection in the Rear of a Business Block.

Saturday last the city engineer was inspecting the digging up of a sewer connection between Eglott's jewelry store and the lateral in the alleyway, when one of the workmen called his attention to a very vile stench arising from a certain part of the ditch. Mr. Swearinger thought it arose from the sewage, but the workman insisted that it came from some decayed animal matter, and a little later he threw out of the ditch an old red flannel shirt and some shreds of cloth of some kind, but thought little more about it till one of the clerks in F. D. Shiras' store came to him bringing a part of a human skull that he found his dog playing with and said he thought they must have found it among the dirt thrown out of the ditch. Afterwards the other portion of the skull was found in the ditch. It appears to be the skull of a white person, probably a woman, according to the judgment of a physician, who might be it about 18 or 20 years of age. The wisdom teeth being only partly grown is the reason this age was fixed on.

The city engineer has been making inquiries with a view to discovering any theory as to how the ghastly relics came to be found in the sewer ditch at a depth of nearly 10 feet. He finds that the ditch was originally dug in May, 1891, and at that time an old out-house stood near the place where the skull was found close to the ditch, and in the rear of what was then known as McNab's saloon. After the original sewer pipe was laid the vault of this outhouse caved in and the sewer was filled up, burying the matter that came from the outhouse. It is supposed that the skull came from this outhouse, which has since been taken away and the vault filled up.

Dr. Weisman formerly had an office near this place and it was thought the skull might have come from his office, but he informed the reporter on being interviewed in regard to the matter that this was not the case.

Some think that the rest of the skeleton might be found by excavating where the old outhouse stood. The matter occasioned a good deal of talk yesterday on the street, but it is probable that no explanation of the mystery of the skull will ever be forthcoming.

THE CITY PARKS.

Paris Gibson Reviews Ald. Williams' Letter and Makes a Strong Plea For the Parks.

The following letter has been received from Mr. Paris Gibson, in which he controverts the position taken by Alderman Williams in his recent letter published in THE TRIBUNE and states the arguments for suburban parks:

Editor of the Tribune:

I desire through the columns of THE TRIBUNE to refer to one or two statements made by Ald. Williams in your issue of the 23d. I also wish to make myself understood on this park question not only to the large taxpayers but to all the people of Great Falls.

Mr. Williams asserts first that he is opposed to these parks purchases on the ground that they will "involve the expenditure of a greater sum of money than can be raised by taxation," meaning, of course, that it is contemplated to raise the money necessary for extensive improvements now. He also asserts that "the cost of improving and beautifying these outside parks will exceed $50,000, an amount for which no provision is or can be made under our present laws on taxation and indebtedness."

In reply to these statements I assert that no advocate of these park measures ever for a moment, contemplated the immediate expenditure of a large sum of money upon any parks within or without the city limits, and the statements of Mr. Williams to the contrary are entirely without foundation and are intended to prejudice the taxpayers against purchasing lands for parks.

Improvements of city parks are almost invariably gradual. The townsite company donated to this city, about four years ago, nearly 100 acres of land in the heart of the town for park purposes. As an evidence that the city has never contemplated extensive improvements upon these lands at once, I have only to state that the entire expense for park improvements since the work was begun, including tree-planting on the avenues of the city and the caring for and watering the same, does not exceed $3,000 a year. In the light of these facts it is not candid on the part of Ald. Williams or anybody else to convey the impression that an expenditure of $500,000 or any large sum is contemplated at the present time or until the population and wealth of our city will warrant it. The theory upon which the advocates of park purchases in Great Falls, under the recent bond issue, have proceeded has been that for a comparatively small sum of money large tracts of land adjacent to the present city limits could be purchased for future parks. This has certainly been my position from the start, and I have based my views not only upon my own experience, but upon the advice of other men in progressive western cities. These being secured, the gradual evolution of beautifully arranged and highly cultivated modern parks becomes an assured fact. For the sum of $40,000 this city has purchased 375 acres of land well situated, near the city limits of today, the largest tract having a river frontage of about one and a half miles. Now suppose the city council had invested this money in blocks of land within the city limits, as proposed by Mr. Williams, how many acres could they have purchased? Probably about 25, for land between the Sisters' hospital and the Boston addition can hardly be bought for less than $1,000 to $2,500 an acre. Alderman Williams thinks "if two or three blocks for parks could be obtained at reasonable prices within the city limits and at an easy distance from the public schools they would be a valuable acquisition," and here he drops this important matter of public parks. Is there anything from the beginning to the close of his letter that shows the least interest on his part in this subject so important to the welfare and happiness, not only of the people now living here, but of succeeding generations? I believe we should not only have parks for school children but for the people as well. Rapid transit has revolutionized the whole theory of public parks. In fifteen or twenty minutes a family living in the center of a crowded city can go by the electric railway to the suburban or rural park and at a cost of but a few cents. Is it of no advantage to have such parks within the reach of everybody, rich or poor? Is there anything more healthful physically or morally for the masses than beautiful parks located beyond the bustle and business of the city? Great Falls was laid out by its founders on a broad scale, because they believed then as they now believe that it is to become one of the greatest industrial centers in the country. Its location at the cataracts of the Missouri speaks for itself, but being in the midst of a semi-arid territory, to make it attractive and healthful money and the combined effort of its people must be employed from this time forward. On this treeless townsite parks and boulevards mean vastly more than in eastern cities where the rainfall is greater and where trees and shrubs grow spontaneously. The public spirited citizens of Denver caught this idea long ago and have made that city a veritable oasis in the desert, attractive to travelers and home seekers. Nothing will draw to this city investors and settlers more than improvements such as I have named. Already the steps taken by our people for the creation of parks are attracting much attention among eastern men who have investments here, and I have yet to learn of the first man among them who has objected to our park plans. The fact that the city treasurer's bondsmen have not as yet made good any deficiency of park money for which they are liable is a very lame argument in favor of repudiating the park purchases. If these purchases are invalid let them be made good by the proper legislation, and then secured to our city forever these valuable lands. If the park purchases were without warrant on the ground that the lands bought are outside of the city limits, and if such a defect cannot be cured by legislation that of course will end the matter, and these purchases will fall; but if defects in the purchases can be remedied I submit it is a gross injustice to Mr. Dunn and the other sellers of lands to our city not to allow them to obtain the necessary remedy from the legislature which is about to convene.

This city has today for public parks, including land donated by the townsite company, 175 acres, costing nominally $40,000 but really costing nothing, as the 120 lots donated by the sellers of the Highland Park land can easily be sold within the next two years for a sum equal to the purchase money of the entire park system, including interest for two years.
