

WAGING WAR ON GARBAGE NUISANCE

OVERSEER DEGAN ENGAGED IN FIGHTING DISEASE GERMS.

Overseer James J. Degan has declared against the garbage nuisance and is waging war on the germs of disease. He has the down town portion of the city under pretty good control, and he is now going after the residence part. In this he wants the co-operation of the householders. From a sanitary standpoint, he says, the residence portion is sadly in need of cleaning. He has the promise of Sheriff Owens to furnish an extra gang of men in that part of the town to thoroughly clean the streets. He asks that the householders will procure barrels, so that the refuse and the old cans and other disease breeding castaways may be gathered and placed in them. Then the scavenger wagons will call and dump the contents out and carry them away.

Mr. Degan also recommends very earnestly the use of chloride of lime in vaults and outhouses.

COYOTE SUICIDES IN MONTANA MILL

DELIBERATELY LICKS UP CYANIDE SOLUTION WHEN CORNERED BY WORKMEN.

All was noise in the Montana Tonopah mill. The stamps were dropping like the roar of the surf on a rocky shore, the Wilbey tables were shifting and puffing, the belts were whirling like a roulette ball, the slush, slush of the cyanide tanks sounded like the slop, slop of the tide.

It was night, and all within was bright as noonday. Without, the night was dark as Wall street. That's the difference between electric lights and not. There are spots in the mill which the bright lights will not efface; there are shadows on the wall. The shadows are eerie, and one cannot pass through them without a shiver.

Ben Bosqui, Pettus, Harry Darling and Dan Fessenden were in the mill when the hours were most shivery, the shadows most eerie. Happening to meet in the slack of the business, they were going over a tragedy of the campus, when out of the darkness and the shadows came a long, mournful moan. Four shudders ran up four backs and ran down again.

"What was that?" gasped Pettus.

"It was the wind," chattered Darling, through clenched teeth.

"Wolf, wolf!" cried Bosqui.

Out from the shadows crept a coyote. It was a big coyote and it did look like a wolf. Bosqui jumped one way, and Pettus jumped the other, and they jumped into each other, and they fell on Darling and they all fell to the ground.

The coyote sat on his haunches and laughed. It was a weird, wicked laugh that died away in a howl.

Up jumped the men and arming themselves with clubs they got ready to waylay the coyote. Bosqui aimed his weapon at the animal and it hit a cyanide tank with a whang that resounded through the building.

"Shoot!" yelled Darling, and the coyote jumped up on the rim of a cyanide tank.

Whiz! went a club from Pettus and it caught the coyote right on the coco, and rolled him over into the slush, slush.

"Rah, rah, rah!" yelled the college boys.

Then they ran to the cyanide tank and saw the coyote swimming the pool.

"He's crossing the Styx," cried Bosqui.

"My sticks helped him," cried Pettus in glee.

"I fastened my eye on him," said Fessenden.

But the coyote went right on swimming, and flopped over at the other side. Then the young men got their clubs and gave chase. They cornered the coyote after he had run twice around the tank, then with a low, mocking laugh, he looked up into Darling's face, turned over and died.

It had deliberately licked up some of the cyanide solution and committed suicide. Can you beat that for yellow journalism in the twentieth century? San Francisco Examiner please copy.

TURNING OUT THE BEST WORK

The bindery of the Bonanza is turning out the best work in the city, and it is giving such great satisfaction that anyone who has his work done there once, never goes anywhere else. The plant is the finest and most complete, not only in the State, but this side of San Francisco. We can turn out all kinds of work that is demanded in the offices of lawyers, brokers, promoters, mining companies, or for any other kind of business, and we guarantee satisfaction in every respect. One trial will be sufficient to establish the truth of this statement. It pays to go where only the best kind of work is done, and it pays to patronize home industry.

WHERE ARE YOUR SUMMER'S WAGES

SUDDEN WINTRY BLAST KEPT PEOPLE BUSY PREPARING FOR JACK FROST.

It is time to doff your summer wear and put on your winter togs, your heavy clothes, and overcoats, your furs, your muffs and sealskins. B-r-r-r-rrr! It's a cold morning. How would you like to be the ice man now?

"What, no ice today?" screamed the ice man; "I'm not coming back for two days."

"I don't care if you never come back," declares the housewife. "Get out of the doorway and let the man come in with the coal."

Stoves were put up by the dozen yesterday, and the old familiar corners in you know where, were filled with the old timers, who had yarns to spin, and nothing else to do but to guess it was going to snow, and then take another guess and guess it wasn't.

The stock market slipped down a few cogs; of course it was on account of the cold weather. If it keeps on slipping, bye and bye we'll forget all about it, and won't care if it never comes back.

But it will come back and then it will soar and soar, and we'll be sore no more.

My, my, what a difference between this and last year. The market had just made up its mind to go up for sure, and it rose from a condition that was no better than the present. There was cold weather, but it did not begin this early, and the market still kept climbing; then the real cold weather came, and the market grew stronger.

But yesterday it was cold, and the market went still lower; today it will be showery, for the weather bureau man says so. The weather bureau man says nothing about the stock market, but we know what it will do. The market usually begins to rise when the autumn leaves begin to fall. The market will please take notice that the leaves are falling.

GREAT INFUX OF IRISH GIRLS

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The arrival of the 1004 unmarried women in the steerage of the White Star liner Baltic from Liverpool had been anticipated by cable dispatches when the steamer sailed, but considerable interest was manifested when the big feminine contingent reached here. Not a little banter also attended its arrival.

H. B. Palmer, purser of the Baltic, said the coincidence of such a large number of single women booked for passage on the Baltic for one trip caused attention in London. Many of the young women are coming here to seek employment in factories and in homes. About 45 per cent are girls who have lived here before, but who returned to Europe for the summer. Many of these brought relatives with them to fill places as servants, arrangements for which had been made in advance.

About one-half of the new comers will remain in and near New York City, the others having tickets for towns in Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio and North Dakota. Most of those who landed were Irish girls who went back this year to attend the Dublin exposition. Some embarrassing incidents marked the arrival of these voyagers at the Battery. They were awaited by a large delegation in Battery park with smiles, but a chorus of "Go 'long wid ye'" filled the air.

WINGFIELD ON SORROWFUL MISSION

George Wingfield arrived late Saturday night from Wonder and Fairview, en route to the home of his family in Oregon, in response to a telegram announcing the possible death of his brother Maurice, under circumstances both deplorable and mysterious.

The information received here is very meagre, giving practically nothing but the bare facts, which are as follows:

The young man left home in the morning on horseback to look up some lost stock. The day passed and he failed to return, and but little was thought of the matter till the night had followed the day without his appearance, and when the morning came without his return, some uneasiness was felt, which at once turned to the darkest forebodings when his horse wet and muddy, bearing the empty saddle, came home.

Search was made with great diligence, but up to the time of sending the telegram, no trace of the missing man had been found, and belief of his death through drowning in some of the sloughs or waterways, grows stronger daily.

It was the intent of the distressed brother, on coming here, to go at once to the scene of sorrowing uncertainty, but he was held up here by illness, and has so far been unable to undertake the journey.

Burt Lundy has had a fast machine in readiness since the receipt of Wingfield's wire Saturday, as it was the intention to make the 300 mile run in a machine in preference to the long railroad journey. They will start, unless news making it unnecessary is received in the meantime, as soon as Wingfield's physician will consent.—Nevada State Journal.

The trial is being watched with the closest attention, and is attracting crowds to the court in the Carpenters' hall.

PAID DEAR FOR JUMPING BOARD

It cost D. Zaro and George Oganovich $47 for attempting to jump their board bill.
