

CORONER'S JURY CENSURES RAILROAD COMPANY

The coroner's jury, after having heard all the evidence obtainable at the investigation of the death of J. Quillett, who was killed by a train at Lamar siding last Wednesday, returned a verdict today. The jury found that the deceased came to his death by being run over by an eastbound freight or passenger train, concluding its verdict by censuring the railroad company as follows:

And we further find that after the body was found, body was permitted to remain on the track unguarded, for several hours, and that as many as five trains passed over it before being removed or attended.—Winnemucca Star.

and wife. The body was met at the depot by a delegation from the Masonic lodge and the Spanish War Veterans and the casket was transferred to the Minden train on the shoulders of the veterans. An American flag draped the casket. At Minden a delegation of Masons were in waiting and assisted in the loading of the casket on the wagon preparatory to its long journey to Mono county. It is thought that it will take about three days to reach Bridgeport on account of the frightful condition of the roads. Telege Hardy, a brother of the deceased, met the widow at Minden and accompanied her to her home in Mono.—Carson News.

ASSAY OFFICE DYNAMITED AT GOLDFIELD

An explosion of dynamite placed at the rear end of the assay office of Joe Grobecker, 618 North Fifth avenue, wrecked the rear of the building at midnight last night, and started many wild rumors as to a number of casualties. Boards from the assay office were blown around the back end of the lot, and the side. Dick Lonergan's house, adjoining, that ran back further than the assay office, was also torn loose at the roof and forced inward by the force of the explosion.

Grobecker was sleeping in the front room when the explosion occurred and was badly stunned by the concussion. There are three rooms in the building, the middle one being occupied by the ore crushing apparatus and the rear by the furnace and fuel room. The furnace occupied the northeast corner of the building. But there was a space of about two feet between the east side of the furnace and the building itself. The foundation of the furnace is heavily constructed of rock, and repelled the force of the explosion, the powder having been placed on the ground and against the outside of the shop. Empty gasoline cans and other articles were blown across the middle of the room, shelves were knocked down, and the place was filled with dust and smoke almost to suffocation. When Grobecker recovered from the shock he rushed to the rear of the building and then around it in his night clothes, but found no clue to the perpetrators. The entire neighborhood was aroused but the excitement soon subsided. The sheriff's office is investigating.—Goldfield Tribune.

LOOKING FOR NEW PASTURES

Bob Parry of Reno, stepped off the morning train. Mr. Parry says he is after pastures green, not for himself, but for a bunch of cattle that he has annexed. He is going to look toward Carson Valley for the feed that is required. He says that hay on the Truckee Meadows is growing to be a matter of worry as the local stock and the cutting up of large tracts of land has made short crops.—Carson Appeal.

HOW TO SPELL THE NAME.

"Don't spell it 'Jarbridge,'" said Mr. Tremewan. "It is 'Jarbridge,' an Indian name for devil, and to be sure, it is a devil of a country to get over. The Jarbridge mountains rise to a height of 12,000 or more feet and are so rugged that a railroad cannot be built within ten miles of the camp of Jarbridge, unless the road enters from Doehle Coler, Nevada.

FOR $ GOLDEN TO BLAME.

Ormsby county has an empty county treasury and this financial condition is causing the commissioners deep study. At the last meeting only five bills were allowed and some of the officials will have to wait for several months before they get their salary. The clerk called the attention of the commissioners to the fact that the wood pile was nearly gone and that the coal hoppers were empty. Nothing done, no money.
