The department ruled that such wines should be labelled port "type" and sherry "type." It is claimed the grape and wine industry of the state represents an investment of $138,512,000. Seventy-five years ago on his father's farm at Chittenden, he saw the flaming intruder of the sky.

WOMEN MAKING A STRONG EFFORT TO BE ENFRANCHISED

Suffrage Convention at Washington Listens to Many Speeches by the Female Delegates

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, April 16.—Woman suffragists will be represented in a party of their own in Pennsylvania politics, according to the report to the American National Woman suffrage association in convention here today, made by President Rachel Foster Avery, of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage association. The Equal Franchise Federation of Western Pennsylvania will enter the field as soon as it has 1,000 members, she declared. She reported in part as follows.

has never lost but 15,000 men by foreign bullets, all told; given a country that has not an enemy and with whom probably no country would refuse to arbitrate, why should it be allowed to expend one third of its natural revenue on preparation for war?

"Women are conservative naturally. They should set their faces like a flint against the new, ambitious policy that would delude us into thinking our huge and costly navy is a national police. Police never fight each other; they take men to court. Navies fight each other and never aim to secure a judicial decision. An international police must replace rival navies. The American School Peace League will help the rising generation to see through the sophistries which are letting us permit our pockets to be picked, under the pretext that it is for national defense against real danger. Before the Third Hague conference in 1915, the women of the country shall wage a new campaign of education."

Alice Duer Miller, the novelist, presented a dramatic argument for woman suffrage. Mrs. Miller is the author of "The Modern Obstacle," "Less Than Kin," and other works and is treasurer of the Equal Franchise society of New York of which Mrs. Clarence Mackay is president. Mrs. Miller said:

"If a thousand years from now I were writing the history of the woman suffrage movement in this country, I would say something like this: 'America was at that time under the dominion of two ideas, borne by two currents, often opposing.' One, her respect for effectiveness, her love for practical achievement; not only, as one of her foreign critics said, her admiration for a 'slick man,' but an honest desire whenever a piece of work was to be done to help to do it. The other, and many people won't agree with me, is the enlargement of the democratic idea. The woman's suffrage movement is in complete harmony with both of these tendencies. No one denies we have work enough to do, and I am glad of it, for I believe ideals without work are almost as pernicious as work without ideals. We have plenty of work to do, but it is not that, it is not the organizations and the growth of membership and the spread of theories that makes me confident of success. It is the extraordinary spirit, that animates the women who are working for woman suffrage—the sense of comradeship and community among them—rich and poor, educated and illiterate, old and young, mothers and daughters.

"A spirit like this promises success, but it promises immediate success, it seems to me, because it is in harmony with our own times, our own people and our own form of government."

In Philadelphia there was organized the Political Equality League for Self Supporting Women. At the public meeting at which this step was taken there were present representatives of thirteen lines of work, professional, commercial and industrial. This league is organized by groups. It is hoped by this means to secure the benefits of the English method, under which separate national organizations group together women of different lines of work have been formed and have worked so effectively in the English campaign for "Votes for Women."

Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, who will present the cause of international peace for the first time at the biennial meeting of women's clubs in Cincinnati in May, presented a report. During the last year Mrs. Mead had given addresses in six European countries and in six states. She said in part:

"While all women hate war, many are hoodwinked by the clamor of vested interests and the naval and military class into supporting the war system. When they read war scares they do not suspect, as Representative Tawney declares, that these are due to the ship combine.
