BAT WORLEY IS KILLED AT TACOMA

Struck down by a giant hydraulic nozzle used in sluicing down the hillside near Lincoln Park, Battiste K. Worley, for many years an employe of this city, was almost instantly killed yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock. Worley was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital in the automobile of Supt. A. J. McDonald of pump station A, but died before the hospital was reached. The nozzle, which he had attempted to hold, had whirled from his grasp, striking him on the forehead and breaking his neck. Worley had been appointed only yesterday to the position of foreman of the sluicing gang.

Yesterday afternoon Worley sent his regular nozzleman into the pit where the sluicing was being done and took hold of the giant nozzle himself. The deflector, or outer end of the nozzle, is a mammoth thing weighing in the neighborhood of 900 pounds. It is controlled by a long wooden bar held by the nozzleman. The water shoots from the nozzle compressed to the pressure of 100 pounds a square inch.

In order to divert the stream to another part of the sluicing pit Worley turned the deflector slightly. The huge pipe, which requires the entire strength of an experienced man to hold in place, continued to turn and Worley was unable to stop it. He loosed his hold and attempted to get out of reach of the nozzle. The huge brass swung around so quickly, however, that he was unable to get away.

Supt. McDonald, standing near Worley, attempted to rescue him but was forced back by the nozzle, which continued to whirl and turn in all directions. McDonald at once telephoned the pump station and the water was turned off two minutes after the accident. Worley's almost lifeless body was carried at once to the automobile and rushed to the hospital.

Worley was 69 years of age and had lived in Tacoma for twenty years. He is well known here, having been engaged in the contracting business before entering the employ of the city. He came to this city in 1892 from Candelaria, Nevada, in which state he had been engaged in the mining business. He was born in Norwalk, Conn., July 10, 1842.

The family lives at 1013 South L street. Worley is survived, besides his widow, by two children, Dean B. Worley, formerly manager of the Empress theatre, and Miss Tracy Worley, bookkeeper for the Pacific Coast Gymnasium company. He also leaves two brothers in Salt Lake City.—Tacoma News, April 23.

WOMAN TELLS OF HORRORS

MISS BRISKIRK, VISITING IN TRUCKEE, TELLS OF WARFARE IN MEXICO.

TRUCKEE, Cal., May 4.—Miss Briskirk arrived in Truckee this morning on a visit to her brother, and she relates a story of deprivation and distress, owing to the guerrilla warfare that is being carried on in Mexico.

When the trouble started Miss Briskirk was living in South America and was about to leave for the United States on a visit. She came north by the Continental route by easy stages and the journey was a pleasant one until the scene of hostilities was reached.

One night the train in which she and a number of other Americans were traveling was held up by so-called revolutionists and their money and other valuables were taken. Their baggage and even the bedding from their berths were levied upon, while Miss Briskirk had her earrings snatched from her ears and a ring from her finger.

The train was then allowed to proceed and at the next consular city she was compelled to seek from the representative of the government a ticket and funds to enable her to travel on to Truckee.

The conditions she witnessed in Mexico are described as terrifying and she cannot understand why intervention is so long delayed.

SQUAW FOUND DEAD IN OLD SMOKE HOUSE

A squaw, who went by the name of Jennie Stewart, was found dead this morning in the old Smoke House building on D. street in the rear of the former Neigh meat market, her body being discovered by two other Pute squaws who are known as Minnie Doe and Minnie Hagan. They reported the matter to Sheriff Seeman, who with Coroner Quick, viewed the body and ordered it removed to an undertaking parlor. At that place a post mortem was held, in which County Physician Toogood examined the body for any signs of foul play. He stated afterwards that, in his opinion the woman had died of exposure and acute alcoholism, there being absolutely no signs of rough treatment. The body was frozen stiff, as the house where the body was found is open and exposed to the cold weather of the past few days. According to the Indians, Jennie was last seen two days ago, and had been drinking. It is thought that the deceased took refuge in the smoke house rather than attempt the long walk to the Pute village near the brewery, and being a frigid night, she succumbed to the cold after the effects of the liquor had worn off. The deceased leaves a husband in this city.—Virginia Chronicle.

Another myth of history is shattered by Sir John Macdonnell, professor of comparative law at University college, London. Galileo, he maintains, did not utter the famous saying, E pur si muove ('And yet it does move'). 'It was said for him 150 years after his death,' says Professor Macdonnell.

Lady Mary Wortly Montagu wrote from Venice at the age of 68: 'It is 11 years since I have seen my figure in a glass; the last reflection I saw there was so disagreeable I resolved to spare myself such mortification for the future, and shall continue this resolution to my life's end. To indulge all pleasing amusements and avoid all images that give disgust is, in my opinion, the best method to attain or confirm health.'
