For President--1912 WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, Of Ohio.

THE MINERS' CONFERENCE.

John P. White, president of the miners' union, is working hard and fairly to get the miners' convention at Wilkes-Barre to ratify the agreement he made with the owners of the anthracite mines. The union has lost its grip on the miners of eastern Pennsylvania in the last ten years and its treasury is almost bare on account of trying to drum up new members. In 1901, the anthracite union had 78,437 members. Last year it had only 13,006 members, and last March, after all the excitement and work that went before the expiration of the old contract, it had only 29,225 members. The funds in the treasury have wasted away from $1,027,120 in 1902, to $197,216 last year.

Foreigners in the union are accountable for the opposition to ratifying the agreement made by President White, but it is evident that only a very small proportion of the foreigners employed in the mines are union men. They are willing to spend money for the cause, though they are the most dangerous element in the field and are accountable for all the trouble with officers of the law. This lack of a sense of responsibility is ominous of evil in the future. Most of them wish to save money enough to go back to their native lands and they live as cheaply as possible while here.

President White told the miners bluntly that their finances would not warrant a strike. The anthracite miners in the union number less than 30,000 out of a total membership of 170,000. The English speaking men in the bituminous fields are the back-bone of the union and they have already advanced $40,000 to the anthracite men. The bituminous miners cannot and will not bear the burden of a great anthracite strike when the anthracite miners have shown so much selfishness and so little loyalty to their union.

This condition, as exposed by President White, proves the failure of labor unionism in such an industry. The mine owners cannot recognize a union which scarcely exists in the ranks of their employes. Mr. White himself says only a few men in the anthracite field are interested in the union. But into this field the revolutionists of the Industrial Workers of the World force themselves as soon as a sign of trouble appears. They wish to destroy the labor unions in order to substitute their brand of so-called socialism which is really anarchist in its aim.

The true interests of capital and labor are identical. Steady employment for labor and steady business for capital go together. The more intelligent American labor earns the more it consumes. The more labor and capital combined produce the more comfort and pleasure there is for all. There is never any general over-production of goods, but there often is under consumption. This is where alien labor, saving to go back home, is a burden. The industrial problem is full of perplexities.

It turns out that nearly every member of the I. W. W. who claims to have been driven from San Diego by the so-called vigilantes is a non-resident of the town. The men who went to San Diego to kick up a disturbance have little reason to complain if they got the worst of it in the row they raised. There went there looking for trouble, and the man who hunts trouble usually gets more than he bargained for.

The Santa Cruz money-lender who stood guard over a satchel full of iron washers while a couple of buncomen made off with his $7,700, which he believed to be in the bag with other money, was 'old enough to know better,' yet he didn't. It really would be well worth while for everybody to read the newspapers, at least occasionally.

The Green River oil field of Utah is attracting considerable attention this spring. Oil men have been inspecting its resources and capital is bringing in rigs and starting development. The oil is of a high grade paraffine base, particularly adapted to refining for the production of the lighter oils.

THE DEATH OF COLONEL NUNAN.

Stockton loses one of her most capable, useful and progressive citizens in Colonel John J. Nunan, publisher of the Evening Mail, who passed away a few days ago after a protracted illness. Together with E. L. Colman and D. H. Berdine, Colonel Nunan founded the Stockton Mail about thirty-two years ago, and the day of his death was the business manager of the paper and largely directed its policy. Almost from the beginning the Mail was a success, and has grown in circulation and influence till it holds a high place in the journalism of California. It speedily broke out of parochial bounds and became noted for the pithy, trenchant and independent way it had of discussing public questions. Mr. Nunan was a strong man intellectually and a trained newspaper writer; he aimed to make the paper breezy and readable and succeeded to the extent that the Mail came to be one of the most frequently quoted journals published in interior of California. It is popular and wields a potent influence in San Joaquin and the adjoining counties. The success of the Mail was largely due to the business sagacity of Colonel Nunan, who took a prominent part in all movements for promoting the interests of Stockton. He helped to modernize Stockton and lift it out of the rut of old fogyism and narrow provincialism. His efforts and optimistic spirit contributed in no small degree to the remarkable progress Stockton has made in recent years. His death is a loss to sane, honest and sound journalism as well as to his family, friends (of whom he had a great number) and the city which he strove to build up.

THE PRESIDENTIAL OUTLOOK.

On May 7th Taft had 493 votes to his credit, leaving him 47 short of enough to give him the nomination on the first ballot. Since then he has captured the Montana, Nevada and Wyoming delegations, four from Tennessee and two from Alabama—an aggregate of 26 votes—bringing his total up to 529 delegates—11 short of the number required to nominate. He can count on Utah's eight and will get Arkansas and a bunch of Texas delegates, enough to nominate.

But Ohio is yet to declare her preference. If his native state should declare against Taft by a decisive vote the blow would probably be disastrous.

It by no means implies the nomination of Roosevelt, but will bring out a strong demand for a compromise candidate. Justice Hughes is in everybody's mouth at the suggestion of a dark horse. He is the one man who is not involved in the factional and personal quarrels which have torn and embittered the republican party, and on whom all factions can unite in harmony. He is an able and clean man of high character and honorable record, and has an enviable national prominence.

However, Hughes is adverse to leaving the supreme bench to become a presidential candidate, and probably no attempt will be made to draft him if Taft wins a victory in Ohio.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

And some people wouldn't recognize what they want if they got it.

A man may praise a woman's pie, but that is no sign he will eat it.

Many a man would have a bigger bank balance if he had fewer friends.

No man seems to think it's up to him to be as good as he thinks others ought to be.

You have a right to your religious and political belief—and the other fellow has just as much right to his.

Probably the serpent told Eve that eating the apple would be just as good for the complexion as any of the advertised preparations and was not as expensive.—Chicago News.

PROPOSED NEW COINS.

This nation has had much experience in the past with coins of the token value of 3 cents. Whether made of silver or of nickel they were alike unmitigated nuisances. They disappeared from the coinage not only because there was no need for them, but because they were a sort of pest. The attempt of the national House of Representatives to bring back the 3-cent piece is simply foolish. That body has passed a bill not only creating a coin of the value mentioned, but also creating a one-cent coin. There is absolutely no popular demand for either. It is well recognized by the intelligent public that an unnecessary kind of coin is merely an unending source of annoyance and error and consequent loss. The country's simple and sensible coinage of the present time answers every need. It is a good deal worse than useless to put into circulation new kinds of coins that nobody wants.

The warmth of the reception tendered to one Dr. Ben Reitman, advertised as manager of the "Queen of the Anarchists," indicates that public opinion in San Diego is old-fashioned as well as rough and impatient. The species of militant patriotism which utilizes tar and feathers to impress reverence for the flag has become archaic in most sections of this broad land. Reitman, however, is probably in favor of recall of decisions and other features of mob government.

The mining districts around Helena, Mont., expect to profit by the rise in the price of silver. There are a number of properties in that region which it is claimed may now be worked at a profit.

Death stalks with equal footsteps through the palaces of the rich and the hovels of the poor."
