Tonopah's Reputation Sustained

Credit is due from the entire Tonopah community to Rev. J. M. Swander, pastor of the Presbyterian church, who has devoted his time the past three or four days in receiving contributions for the relief of the flood sufferers in Ohio and Omaha. Last week an appeal was sent out from the devastated cities for supplies and practically every community in the United States hastened to answer the cry of distress. In Tonopah no heed was paid until the Rev. Swander took the initiative, secured a store room for a depot and announced that he would receive supplies and would forward them to the eastern destinations.

Rev. Swander devoted his entire time to the receipt of contributions, and also packed the articles in cases. He is no stranger to manual labor and in the manner in which he handled the saw and hammer proved him to be familiar with the uses of the two implements. Last evening he finished packing nine cases and turned them over to the Wells Fargo company for transportation to the east.

Throughout the past few days but little assistance has been given Mr. Swander, the public being content to sit idly by and watch the minister as he worked. Few friends volunteered assistance in the packing of the articles but it was noticed that the store room was not packed with spectators nor did the ranks of the volunteers increase as the work progressed.

It is due to the efforts of Rev. Swander that Tonopah has shown a slight interest in relieving the distress of suffering humanity, and has not turned her back to the cry for help. Through the efforts of one man the reputation of Tonopah has been sustained.

Credit should be given, however, to the many donors who contributed goods and made it possible for Tonopah to be credited among the other cities that made like offerings.

Tariff Only

The president's formal application calling the extra session for April 7 suggests that the session should occupy itself solely with tariff revision, instead of contemplating the possibility, even, of any revision of the banking and currency laws. Of course, congress once called together has the absolute power over its own program of legislation. But as Leader Underwood and the President agree on the confinement of the work to the one great issue, it is assured that there will be no deviation from it except in the remote possibility that some overwhelming and supreme question in foreign relations should arise. To undertake too much would tend to baffle any hope that anything definite and conclusive could be reached. The banking and currency laws are in the complexity of detail which they involve only less complex than the questions imbedded in tariff legislation, and the business of the country waits anxiously to know precisely what will be done in tariff revision as it will affect every business man in the nation and a great number of them in very vital fashion. The preparation of the tentative schedules, as an omnibus bill will be submitted instead of a series of bills, has advanced so far that congress will have its work cut out pretty surely prior to April 7. It is understood that the Republican minority will take none but a nominal share in the discussion of the various schedules, unless in the ripening of a contingency which has made itself more than possible.

Every tariff bill is inevitably a compromise between divergent points of view, even where the same general theory of the work to be achieved exists. There has developed in the preliminary discussion, that goes into schedule-making, a growing divergence of opinion, and the degree of that protection. The Democrats are precluded from that general log-rolling, openly practised, that compromises a tariff revision upward. Yet the same moving factor exists, for sections and interests will battle against much reduction dealt to the special industry peculiar to a region, in many instances. Cut the others to the bone, but spare us, is the shibboleth. Of course, if this clashing is strong and clamorous in the Democratic majority, the Republicans will plunge into the game with fresh zest.

It may prove a very delicate and diplomatic work which Mr. Underwood will needs handle and it may try his diplomacy to the utmost to placate differences without violating the definite animus of present tariff revision, which is to reduce rates to the practicable working minimum which a long tariff-drenched nation can stand.

If any man can do this it will be Mr. Underwood, who has stamped himself on the country as a wise and tolerant statesman, animated by a keen sense of the good of the nation as against the advantage of sectional claims. A good tariff system will have owed much to this well balanced statesman, when it shall have been passed, as a man of large and inclusive perspective and the power to see things in the round.
