Useless Ordinances

After grave deliberation compatible with the seriousness of the case at bar the county commissioners recently enacted an ordinance requiring all motor vehicles to display head and tail lights. This regulation applies with equal force to trucks and motorcycles, but like most local ordinances, it is honored more in the breach than observance.

That such enactments continue to appear can only be explained through ascribing them to temporary aberration on the part of the commissioners. If they expect them to be enforced they should see they are observed and that infractions are punished according to the terms of the ordinance. It does not take a Sherlock Holmes to discover daily the gusto of violators who think the plain every day citizen who has to walk is a fit subject to throw a scare late in the most alarming manner. Not a night passes but vehicles can be seen on Main street parading in front of officers who are paid for enforcing the ordinances. Many of these buzz wagons go without lights without reason or explanation. It certainly cannot be in the interest of economy for the fact that a man owns and operates a machine is evidence that he is not pressed for the needful and is superior to the small economies which pedestrians have to exercise in the conduct of their business and domestic affairs.

No one pay any attention to these ordinances for the reason they are never enforced.

But the question arises, why should not enforcement follow? What right have the head officers or any of their deputies to discriminate between different classes of offenders? Why should the owner of an automobile be immune from prosecution when the poor drunkard is hauled off to the station and then compelled to appear in a costly proceeding before the court? The latter is a victim of misfortune which might be condoned but the man who runs a machine at night without lights does so deliberately and without any excuse. The same may be said of those who delight in rushing through the city at top speed of their machines to the imminent danger of crippling those who have to walk. The worst violators of this ordinance are the feather headed youths who disport themselves on motorcycles by tearing up and down Main street with an admiring girl perched upon the rear seat.

There is an ordinance against this speeding. Who ever heard of any one being arrested? The records do not show any instances. The county has not been enriched a dollar by the officers who draw salaries for posing as ornaments of the civic world. If there is any desire to find who are breaking the speed law it is only necessary for the officers to stand at the door of the justice court any day at change of shifts in the afternoon and watch the speed maniacs who tear down Florence avenue with all kinds of noise-making devices warning pedestrians to make way or take the consequences.

Then there is the matter of licenses. Recently the county went to the expense of advertising an ordinance directed against the peripatetic agents who periodically visit Tonopah for the purpose of separating the people from their money by booking orders for merchandise. They come at regular intervals and their faces are familiar to most householders who have been importuned to buy from outside firms. Has any attempt been made to enforce collection of a license as prescribed by ordinance? A list of the amounts so collected would make interesting reading to the business men who have to contribute to the maintenance of town officials.

Let us have a show down. If the ordinances are meant for enforcement let them be enforced without fear or favor.

Waiting for Oddie to Speak

The southern country is waiting for Governor Oddie to do something to clear up the mess created by the report of the investigators into the administration of the State Bank and Trust company by Receiver Wildes and Judge Langan. Two weeks have elapsed since the appearance of the report and the silence issuing from the Carson City executive mansion is loud enough to cut with a broom handle. It can hardly be possible that Oddie has been gagged by the Ormsby county ring and beaten into submission, but it does not look good to a man down in the sagebrush.

Attorney General Thatcher demanded a special session for the impeachment of Judge Langan. There was no equivocation or beating around the bush about the report. It was a straight from the shoulder accusation hurled with all the lucidity and force at the command of the able attorney general but the shot seems to have missed the mark. At least, it failed to make more than a temporary impression. Instead of being a missile from a hundred ton gun it appears to have touched Oddie as a mosquito bite to be brushed aside.

Why should the governor of a great state wait like a lackey for the pleasure of Judge Langan to give his side of the story. When a burglar is discovered going through your house you do not hesitate to shoot, if you have the weapon handy. It is up to the burglar to get away. You are not going to lead first and bring a scoldard to assist him down from your window. This, however, appears the policy of the governor.

Judge Langan is accused of conspiring with Receiver Wildes to steal from the depositors of the bankrupt banks of Goldfield, Tonopah, Manhattan and Carson City. His act is alleged to be felonious.

Then why treat with him at all? If he is guilty he is without the pale of the law, having forfeited his manhood in the debacle that ended in the looting of the defunct bank. If he is innocent he takes a strange way to advise the public by declaring himself. Langan says, "This is all news to me. I must have time to read the report of the attorney general." The time killing jurist must be suffering from sleeping sickness if he has not had time to digest the contents of that sixteen page pamphlet.

The shortest cut to a solution of the charges is to call the special session forthwith and be done with it. Cut the bridges and advance. This is not the time or place to temporize. The county republican convention went on record pledging an investigation by the legislative candidates. The legislature has done its part of the work and it is up to the governor to stand by his party platform and put a quietus on rumors and reports by delivering facts.

Let the trial proceed.

The Rule of Injunction

Thank God there is one judge in the United States with a broad sense of the ridiculous when applied to the amenities of ordinary life. He sees the folly of encouraging every Tom, Dick and Harry who thinks he has a grievance to redress in hastening off to the nearest court and demanding a writ of injunction. This phase of the law has been invoked so often that the very suggestion has been a stench in the nostrils of decency. Labor unions have fought the system and Congress has been called upon to suggest a remedy but all to no effect. The injunction still flourishes but the weight of public sentiment aroused by its unrestricted use has taught the judiciary to be more careful in issuing such writs. One of the best signs of the growing sentiment against this form of snap judgment is found in the decision of Justice Hand, of the federal court of the district of New-York, who, in a strong opinion scathingly denounced a firm of rascals who sought to secure immunity by applying for an injunction against a firm of publishers intent on exposing the villainy of the concern. The plaintiff in the case heard of the article which it was proposed to print against their interest and thereupon fled themselves to a lawyer and applied for a peremptory order prohibiting the publishers from going ahead with the exposure. The court, after long deliberation, ruled that the publisher was strictly within his rights when he advertised that he was going to print an exposure of the doings of the fraudulent company. That the business methods of the plaintiffs were open to criticism is beyond peradventure may be judged from the following section of the opinion:

"While editors are not exempt from the common motives of other men, they may, and in this case did entertain a general desire to help their readers and expose such as may practice upon their credulity. That is a very admissible purpose in a newspaper. The refusal of the plaintiffs advertising long before this controversy became acute is a corroboration of that motive."

Somebody will get that McLean baby's goat yet even though it is the richest kid in the world with $100,000,000 to his credit in papa's banks. His latest plaything is a sand plot with a real live Billy goat that can butt like the business end of a mule.

When mountain lions call at a country club as they did at Verdi the other day it is certainly a call of the wild.
