VANDERLIP'S BANKING BILL.

MR. FRANK A. VANDERLIP, president of the National City bank of New York, on the invitation of the senate finance committee, has prepared a banking and currency bill as a substitute for the administration measure now in the hands of the committee. Mr. Vanderlip's bill frankly creates a central national bank, and would give it a huge capital. This bank would be sternly controlled by law, its functions and operations duly designated by statutes and regulations; and it is probably what might fairly be called, from the consensus of present feeling, an ideal bill from the standpoint of the banker and financial expert, contrasted with the crude and self-contradictory bill which is being supported by the administration, a bill which Bryan supports as being practically in accord with his own greenback notions, and which former Senator Aldrich condemns because it does accord therewith.

Mr. Vanderlip's bill differs also from the Aldrich plan in that it presents a straight, single central national bank proposition, instead of a central reserve association with subsidiary banks attached thereto. It is not such a bill as would be considered sound from an expert banking view, but only to be approved because of present public feeling and in contrast with the terms of the pending bill.

The merits of Mr. Vanderlip's bill are that it would unify the financial system of the country, whereas the administration bill segregates these financial interests into a large number of separate financial units, and these units not mutually helpful. But since the business of this country is, and must be, considered as a whole, and the business of one part of the country affecting all, it would appear that Mr. Vanderlip's idea is the true one. In the operation of the administration bill we might see one part of the country flourishing and in good financial condition, while others might be undergoing a stringency or even a panic. Mr. Vanderlip's bill would provide against a panic anywhere, and would bring the whole resources of the country to bear in the maintenance of a sound, flexible and safe working banking system.

Mr. Vanderlip was heard by the finance committee of the senate in his criticisms upon the administration bill. These criticisms were so radical, they went so directly to the foundation head of the matter, that the committee was immensely impressed, and Mr. Vanderlip was urged to prepare a bill along the line of his views as communicated to the senate finance committee.

It is probable that neither house nor senate will agree to this Vanderlip substitute; but if both would, that agreement would be immensely to the advantage of the country as a whole.

A DEMOCRATIC TRUST.

COMMENTING on the Bonanza's criticism of Louis Cohn, register of the Nevada land office, the Ely Record suggests that the administration is more intent on securing support for the party than in accommodating those who are interested in developing western resources. Here is what the Ely Record has to say:

"Under the present ruling the man or company acquiring patents is prevented from securing competitive bids on the work. The ruling is, in fact, an attempt on the part of the administration to build up a democratic newspaper trust, with the object of crushing out all papers not favorable to the powers in control of the party, which can be extended even to the democratic press not favorable to local or state bosses of the party. By this method the freedom of the press will be largely curtailed. No democratic paper will dare to criticize the administration while the man who is compelled to buy space in newspapers in order to secure patents to his mining ground is denied the right of competition. It would be just as consistent for the government to announce that only democratic engineers would be allowed to do the surveying, and that only loyal democrats be permitted to do the necessary work on the claims. It is a species of petty graft in keeping with the methods of a Tammany boss."

The death of Colonel William Nelson, the veteran editor of the Salt Lake Tribune, will leave a vacuum in the newspaper ranks of Utah. Nelson was a man whose name is identified with history as one who was chiefly instrumental for prosecution of the leader of the Mountain Meadow massacres.

Volunteers from the former crew of the Oregon propose to man their old ship on the voyage through the Panama canal. This is an indication of what would happen in the event of war with Mexico. Wild lions would not keep men from enlisting just for the fun of teaching Mexico a lesson in international courtesy.

The newspaper business has its ups and downs, but it is a game that all millionaires are not fitted for. Senator Kearns of Salt Lake has climbed down off the tripod of the Salt Lake Telegram to devote his entire attention to mining. He knows more about the latter game.

Had the ghost of old Don Gaspar Portola been hovering around the heads of the Golden Gate last week the jolly old soul would feel repaid for his discovery of a city that knows how to celebrate with unctious. It takes a tropical temperament to indulge in the carnival spirit.

The glass of grog idea as an essential to the heroism of sailors was somewhat shattered by the appearance yesterday of eight men-o'-war's men from an American battleship at a convention of the W. C. T. U. in Brooklyn.

Kinging and queening come high if one is to judge from the fact that Queen Mary of England has to reduce her household expenses.

Outrages against women and children will be paid for with compound interest when the United States gets action on Mexico.

Huerta holds on to his job with all the tenacity of a democratic officeholder.

Owes His Life to This Lung Remedy

If you neglect a continued cough or cold, you are in constant danger of easily contracting serious Lung Trouble. This cough or cold which does not yield to ordinary treatment should be a warning to you and preventive measures should be taken as soon as possible. In many cases Eckman's Alternative, a remedy for Throat and Lung Trouble, has brought permanent recovery. Read this:

"Gentlemen—In the year 1908 I was taken with a heavy cold and a nasty short cough. I went to several doctors, who gave me a lot of medicine. Finally I went to a specialist, who gave me creosote that made me sick and the cough still kept up. I stayed there for one year, and then went to a farm near Jersey City, a very sick man. About the time of my return, my brother recommended Eckman's Alternative to me very highly. It is now nearly two years since I first took it. I am now well, and I dare say that it would have been buried long ago if it had not been for Eckman's Alternative. (Affidavit.)"
