STEALING FROM THE BABY.

IT doesn't do for a weak nation to have more of this world's goods than will suffice to provide bread and butter. As soon as a small country gets a windfall then the big neighbors come in and take it away. It is another illustration of survival of the fittest; the supremacy of the lordly lion over the slinking hyena who scavenges the forests that have been ravaged by the king of beasts.

South Africa was happy and independent so long as the Boers had nothing more than poverty to show for their labors, but the moment they found gold in quantities greater than the wildest dreams of avarice, they aroused the covetous desires of a hungry world. The presence of wealth cost the Boers their independence and it is a fair inference that they would have preserved their political independence to this day if they had not been cursed with gold. They found it did not pay to be rich unless you are rich enough to hire armies to defend your hoards from the international cracksmen who go prowling about with military strength looking for whom they may devour. England yearned for the yellow metal which poured forth from the mines of the Transvaal at the enormous rate of $200,000,000 a year and that nation was not content until it wrested this wealth from the sturdy Dutch descendants whose inferior numbers alone compelled them to eventually surrender their treasured holdings.

John Hays Hammond is a nice prototype of the patriot to criticize the action of the government at Washington for temporizing with Mexico. He was the mainspring of the Boer burglary, and it was the intercession of the United States that saved his life and left him to enjoy his millions in his own country.

"I am ashamed to belong to a country that does not protect its people," shouts Hammond, who not long ago was mentioned for an eminent position at Washington. John has a very poor memory when he forgets that his life was spared by the representations of the United States, and he has no cause to turn traitor to the country that saved him from the scaffold. But that is another matter.

The real instigation of the trouble in Mexico is the greed for gold, the craving for money and the lust for wealth. Nothing else any nothing more. The oil trusts have that country by the neck just the same as Venezuela was in the clutches of the asphalt trust of the United States and we were almost embroiled in war through the machinations of that monopoly. It is just the same as the encroachments of British capital in the rubber fields of Brazil, the conquest and partition of the Congo by Belgium and the tearing asunder of Colombia for the construction of a canal. It is the history of the world all over. The weak must make way for the strong, and the dwarf who disputes the path of the giant must bite the dust under the heel of his adversary. Diminutive Switzerland and the tiny republic of Monaco are the only exceptions to the rule, and they are excepted because they have no natural resources that can be pillaged and brought home to the domain of the conqueror.

The oil interests furnish the latest example of money-hunger, and the settlement of the interecine war in that unhappy country will not be sugar-coated until the question of disposing of the natural resources of the nation are settled. Mexico has been exploited by vandals who laugh behind the protection of fourteen-inch guns and a fleet of dreadnaughts at the struggles of a valiant people. The Mexican people did not court the conflict that was forced on her through the revolutions fomented by powerful nations whose monopolists thirsted for a share of the spoils. After peace is restored across the Rio Grande there will ensue the real struggle for loot in the shape of concessions, and the best hope for the distressed nation is that some strong Lincoln will rise up and issue an ultimatum to place a period to this confiscation of prize money.

PLACE YOUR ORDERS.

NOW is the time to place your orders for extra copies of the Boost issue of the Daily Bonanza. The edition will be limited to orders, and after the issue is exhausted no more can be had. Local business men have been slow to take advantage of the opportunity to enroll their names on the special circulation list, and it is a fact that more orders have come from the outside than have been received from home. Yesterday two firms in Los Angeles ordered 200 copies and a Denver company sent in a check for 200 copies. This does not speak well for the local men who have their interests centered in Tonopah and who should be the first to let the great outside world know that Tonopah, unlike most other old mining camps, has just entered on an era of prosperity whose limitations cannot be fixed for this decade or the next. Assuming that one or two of the preferred prospects that linger on the threshold of production come into the ore which is indicated by their vast investments, the angury will favor another long lease of life. The potentialities are greater than ever and it is a notorious fact that the oldest mine in the district is better situated today than at any period in its history.

Perhaps you are surprised to hear such a statement. There are other developments that will cause the world to sit up and take notice of Tonopah. These will appear in the Business Men's Edition of the Bonanza, to be issued on the 20th of December. If you want to know what is doing right here under your feet you must wake up and help distribute the statistical edition of the Bonanza. When you learn of the many developments going on right in your midst you will feel like shouting and getting up on the tallest building in town and megaphoning the glad tidings to everybody who has a dollar to invest.

NEVADA CAPITALISTS MAY BUY ZEILA MINE

JACKSON, Cal., Dec. 3.—There has not been a settlement of negotiations affecting the Zeila mine, but it is believed that the property will be taken over by Nevada capitalists in the near future, as the indications of a good mine are there, especially in the north end.

BRUNSWICK MINE PAYS STOCKHOLDERS DIVIDENDS

GRASS VALLEY, Cal., Dec. 3.—Almost simultaneously with the news of a dividend from the Brunswick mine comes the information from private sources that much better rock has been encountered in the bottom of the Union Hill mine, which adjoins the Brunswick.
