IMPOSING ADDITIONAL TAXES.

WITH the industries of the country largely paralyzed and labor out of work, it is no time to impose additional taxes, and taxes, too, which are entirely unnecessary," declared James R. Mann, Republican minority leader of the house of representatives, in a statement today.

Congressman Mann's statement is regarded as an important utterance in view of the fight the Republican minority is making in both house and senate to prevent the Democratic majority from imposing a so-called "war" tax on the people in addition to their other burdens of taxation, at a time when this country is at peace with all the world.

"There is no need to put new taxes on the people at this time," Mr. Mann asserts. "While there may be a slight falling off in customs receipts during the European war, that can easily be more than met by proper governmental economy. The war in Europe may be over soon and the treasury can meet the expenses of the government without difficulty for a long time to come if it draws on the government money now deposited in the banks. Much of the money already appropriated need not be used for the present if the president will direct the departments to practice economy. There are many things which can wait over. Temporary delay in many cases will be no injury.

"For seven months of this year ending with July 31, before the war began, our imports from foreign countries were $122,000,000 more than they were for the same period last year, while our exports were $126,000,000 less. That is caused by the Underwood tariff. The balance of trade in our favor for these seven months in this year was $60,000,000. For the same seven months last year, the balance of trade in our favor was $308,000,000. This shows a falling off in the balance of trade in our favor in seven months before the war commenced of $248,000,000. That is equivalent to a demand on us of $248,000,000 in gold. That is one of the main troubles with the country now and is the result of the new tariff law.

"If we were manufacturing the goods we use instead of importing them, we would have prosperity, and if we had a sufficiently high import duty on the goods we bring in from abroad, we would have sufficient revenue without question. What we need now is economy and not new taxes. What we have under the Democratic administration is extravagance and additional taxation."

MEDALS FOR MEDIATORS.

CONGRESSMAN FLOOD has introduced a joint resolution in the house, under the terms of which it is proposed to confer gold medals upon the A. B. C. mediators, the diplomatic representatives of Brazil, Argentina and Chile in this country, for recognition of their services as peacemakers at a time when it looked as though the United States would be compelled to spank Mexico. This country having shown its appreciation of their good work, Messrs. De Gama, Naon and Suarez might find employment as mediators between the mighty warring powers in Europe, or, in case they are told to go about their business after making their offer, they could take a little jaunt down into Mexico and try their luck in patching up the differences between Carranza and Villa. There is really no end to the opportunities offered peacemakers these days.

PROSPECTS PREFERRED.

IT sometimes takes courage to invest money in something that cannot be seen, but that is often done in making investments in mining. The simple fact that a property has not been developed and that the ore bodies cannot actually be measured, does not alone constitute a good and sufficient reason for condemning a property. If the geological formation and other indications that the ore exists in sufficient quantity and under such conditions that profitable mining would in all probability be possible, then investment would be warranted. Although developed mines can sometimes be bought the chances for the most profitable investment are in favor of the undeveloped properties with favorable indications.

Another reason for conserving timber is that if the price of food keeps on going up as a result of this war, we may have to eat breakfast food three times a day.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Goldfield suffragettes did not think the flag of Nevada was artistic enough in its gorgeous settings so they painted the lily by adding a complete border of gold fringe.

Simply to keep up the record of a campaign year it is up to the justices of the supreme court who are boosting the Democratic ticket to vote a parole for Panerer.

One T. R. denounces the liquor traffic and sides with Prohibition in Kansas. If there is any ism that he has not favored a reward will be paid for its production.

Italy still clings to its policy of "safety first."

FIGHTING FOR THREE DAYS WITHOUT SEEING THE ENEMY

(By International News Service.) LONDON, Oct. 1.—Modern war machinery, especially the tremendous long range of the guns, makes fighting nerve-racking, according to the wounded back from France, because the soldiers, for the most part, cannot see the enemy.

Among the last contingent of wounded arriving in London is a lance corporal of the Camshaft Rangers, who gave the following personal impression of the fighting: "The disconcerting thing in battle nowadays is that you may be fighting for hours on end and never as much as see an enemy to grapple with. We lay for ten hours in the trenches last Saturday, with rifle fire dropping around us like raindrops in heavy shower."

The roar of the guns was always there like the thunder that you hear in a big storm, and you could see one long line of little white puffs of smoke away in the horizon every time the Germans fired. Beyond that, you couldn't see anything, and it was only an odd sibilant in the arm or leg or hand from a bullet that made you realize you were in battle.

"It is a big test of men's fitness for soldiering if they can put up with that for a whole day without losing their nerve. We had been fighting for three whole days before we set eyes on a German, though we were under fire all the time. It was at last we saw them more frequently at close quarters, and then we had plenty of hand to hand fighting.

"The rangers were very lucky, indeed, to get off so lightly as they did, for we were continually harassed by the German cavalry and artillery. At one point we were annoyed so much by a battery of horse artillery that kept coming too close that the men were obviously getting tired of it, and at last we got the order to go for them. We crept up slowly to where the battery was posted, and when within a few hundred feet we sprang to our feet with a yell and swept down on the Germans before they had time to look around. They couldn't stand it and fled, leaving their guns behind them. Later, the enemy began to press forward in such strength that we could not hold our ground, and so we fell back, after destroying the guns as best we could.

"The way the Germans sacrifice their men for the sake of making an impression is appalling. One position on our left that we would have fallen back from in any case because it was dominated by a battery which we could not locate, was advanced against by the German infantry under a heavy fire. They came on in one long, never-ending stream, while our rifle and gun fire tore hideous gaps through their ranks. The Red Cross men say that in front of that position alone sixteen hundred dead and wounded were picked up after the fight was over. Our loss was not more than twenty of all ranks."

"What we are wondering is how long the Germans can keep up this sort of thing. I have seen our cavalry thrown into confusion merely because the horses shied at the heaps of dead bodies they had to tread over when attempts were being made to clear our front of the advancing Germans."

In a letter to his friends at Bristol, Sergeant T. Cahill, an Irish soldier serving with the expeditionary force, says: "The Germans give us no rest night or day, and those of us who have come through it will never forget to our dying day what it is to have to fight here. The Red Cross girls, and their pretty faces, and their sweet ways, are as good men as most of us. They are not supposed to venture into the firing line at all, but they get there all the same, and devil the one of us durst turn them away.

"There'll be lots more fighting here before we get through, but you may be sure we'll come out right in the end."

"The French are fighting hard all around us with a grit and a go that will carry them through. Have you ever seen a little man fighting a great big hulking giant, who keeps on forcing the little man about the place until the giant tires himself, and then the little one, who has kept his wind, knocks him over? That's how the fighting around here strikes me. We are dancing about round the big German army here, but our turn will come.

"The Germans are now up to all sorts of tricks to hide their batteries, and much of their effect is due to the fact that shells drop about your ears when you are least expecting them. It is a favorite trick to keep a battery well masked for hours, and then when our infantry are deploying, within range, without the least notion of what is coming, the German shells begin to fall round like the autumn leaves. That's very trying to the nerves, or was at first, but we are now getting used to it."

GETTING RID OF SURPLUS HONORS

GERMAN EMPEROR COMPLIES WITH INTERNATIONAL COURTESY.

(By Associated Press.) LONDON, Oct. 1.—According to Sir Edward Grey, the German emperor on August 4 sent one of his aides-de-camp to the British ambassador with the following message: "His majesty begs that you will tell the king that he has been proud of the titles of British field marshal and British admiral, but that in consequence of what has occurred he must now at once divest himself of those titles."

This was written by Sir Edward Grey in London on August 8, and set in the new monthly naval list, just issued, a month after the actual event, one reads: "Admirals of the fleet: His Imperial Majesty, William II, German Emperor and King of Prussia, K. G. G. C. V. G.; his Royal Highness Prince Albert William Henry of Prussia, K. G. G. C. B."

ARTESIAN FLOW IN SMOKY VALLEY COUNTRY

This week there have been forty or fifty men from Goldfield and Tonopah in Smoky Valley seeking land on which to file, says the Austin Reveille. The cause of the stampede for these lands is the discovery of artesian water. Back of Miller's store, some 20 miles north of Round Mountain, an artesian flow has been developed that gushes nine feet in the air. The water strata was struck at a depth of 100 feet.

North of Miller's on the Jones ranch, a similar flow has been struck at a depth of 65 feet.

The immense stretches of rich lands in Smoky Valley have been known for years to every person that has traveled up and down the valley. The lofty ranges on both sides are annually covered with heavy snows. Water flows from the mountain sides each spring in quantities sufficient to irrigate thousands of these rich acres. It has been only the last few months that practical tests have been made to determine whether there is not an underground lake or stream forever replenished from these annually melting snows.
