LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF THE WAR

Correspondence of the Associated Press

PETROGRAD, Sept. 1.—The evacuation of Poland was decided upon by Russia in 1910, declares the Ruskys invalid, the Russian military organ, in a discussion of the general staff's before-the-war plans for the defense of the western frontier.

"Before the war," says the journal, "Russia anticipated that in the event of war Austria and Germany, because of their rapid means of mobilization and immense technical resources, would turn their attention first of all against Russia. To frustrate this plan it was decided in 1810 that the Russian territory jutting into Germany and the fortified places west of Brest-Litovsk should not be organized for a state of war. The region further east was chosen for the concentration of the Russian forces."

"It would have been dangerous to attribute too great an importance to and to have held on to the Naraw and Vistula, with their fortified towns. It is better to take advantage of the depth of our theater of war to draw the German armies far from their base and to force them to exhaust themselves. To this end it was necessary to sacrifice the Polish salient. Three months have elapsed since the Russian army started to put this plan into effect, and it has prevailed since the month of fighting and privations weaken the enemy. There are already evidences that the moral force of the German army is weakening in its attack, and prisoners confirm that this weakening is not only moral, but physical.

"This war will be decided by the armies in battle, and it is of no importance where this battle will take place. Thus our retreat assures us victory, for our armies are only now beginning to develop, while an abundance of munitions of war awaits us in the near future, thanks to the mobilization of the national industry and to the orders placed abroad, whereas for the moment the enemy is in a favorable position in this regard.

"A glance backward shows that at the beginning of the war the Germans threw the mass of their army against France. This leap forward on their part had happy results for us, for we advanced into enemy territory, notably in Galicia; now the tables are turned. However, it is impossible to hamper the liberty of movement of the Russian army in any particular region or on any particular frontier, and it would be impracticable to waste garrisons in defending fortified positions in Przemysl. That is towns which are none too safe, as the why, examining after a year of war, the map of the Russian front, we see the necessity for the living Russian armies to maneuver and deploy on their base line. This would be the most useful object to aim at, especially in view of the situation which the necessity for the living Russian April.

"At the present time we have pitted against us nearly all the German cavalry, nearly all the Austrian army, and more than half of the total German forces—about 70 divisions—and the enemy artillery has numerous guns of all calibres. The Russian army is offering a heroic resistance; it is not only standing up under the most hellish fire, but it is inflicting countless losses upon the enemy, and wearing him out, notwithstanding his technical perfection. We are getting nearer to our supplies of ammunition, by means of which we will correct our line and throw back the enemy. If only for this reason we can say that the evacuation of Warsaw, the line of the Vistula-Ivangorod, Novo-Georgievsk will make certain that the Russian offensive this time will be definite and irresistible.

"At the threshold of the second year of the war Russia has the most definite plans for the issue of the campaign, while maintaining at the same time the firm resolution to wage this fight to a victorious end."

FISH LAKE HUNTING CLUB ORGANIZED

TONOPAH SPORTSMEN SECURE FINE PRESERVES FOR DUCK SHOOTING

The Fish Lake Hunting club of Tonopah has been formed, although the organization has not progressed to the point where the officers and other similar details may be announced. The club is the result of efforts put forth by W. H. Blackburn, A. H. Jones and others, principally officials and department heads of the mining companies, together with business men of Tonopah.

They have already secured about 1000 acres of preserves, giving two miles of lake shore and slough edge at Fish Lake. The ground secured is part of the Chitovich, Borax Smith and Patterson ranches in Fish Lake valley. This preserve does not by any means exclude the private hunter, as there is about twelve miles of slough and lake frontage, the greater portion of which is open to all who desire to shoot.

The club has a seven-room clubhouse. An efficient chef will be installed and entertainment will be provided for members and their guests during the duck shooting season. The distance from Tonopah is 60 miles and the road is easily negotiable by a machine in less than three hours.

How It Feels to Visit the Old Workings Now Inhabited by Tributers

(By a Tributer Himself)

It is a novel experience to visit the underground workings of the Montana and the Midway mines at this time when these properties are almost entirely given over to leasers, so far as the older workings are concerned, with the reserved ground either being developed or about to be.

To the average person who has occasionally visited the lower world of Tonopah at a depth of around seven or eight hundred feet, the hum of activity and life has become an inseparable thing from the drifts and other openings below the surface. Now all is a great silence. One steps off the skip at whatever level he desires and no friendly "eager" greets him, the electric light shines as brightly as it did in the days when the ore cars were being hoisted to the top bearing their golden burdens, but now the brightness of the station only reminds one of the past. The feeling of loneliness which comes with the realization that the end has been reached for this part of the mine is, to say the least, discouraging. A mine, you know, is planned to add a new section for each that becomes exhausted. One knows that no great stope filled with machine drills is beyond in the darkness and that if he expects to find "trimmers," miners, and the many others usually met with in an active working mine he will be mistaken and disappointed. He must be his own guide and can follow his individual lead in any direction he lists. The vast labyrinth of the under world of Tonopah Montana and Tonopah Midway are before him and there are none to say him nay.

To the old hardened miner this appears as the purest sentimentalism, but to one who remembers the past and sees the present the thoughts will not down. With a heaviness of heart and a sigh the visitor begins the tramp through the long lonesome caverns. It is not a cheerful journey. The way is dark and the dangers are many, for the old timbers in many instances are broken and look very forbidding indeed. The ground is coming in, shortly the openings will be impassable.

Suddenly a light is seen and men are at work. You exchange greetings coupled with the questions as to "how's she looking," and receive an invitation to come down and see the pay streak. There in all the glory of its primeval richness looms the very rock for which all these openings have been made and now instead of the corporations taking all the output and the miner the wage, the order is reversed and the miner takes the larger share and the company the smaller. Poor men are making many times wages and the future holds out to them promise of profits beyond any ever dreamed of in wages.

The fever is contagious and the hopes of the fortunate tributers are in the air of the place and you wish you were doing the same thing down there in the depths of these mines. There is then a bright side to this picture and it throws the gloomy one out of your mind, to return no more. The workings are filled with places where pay streaks may be developed and the gambling instinct innate in the human heart rises; the fever has you; you are inoculated and you return to the surface with the determination to hazard a lease yourself. The result of the visit recalls the line "was ever woman in this humor wooed, was ever woman in this humor won?"

and an X-ray picture was taken to determine the nature of the hurt.

TWIN FALLS RAILROAD MAY COME TO NEVADA

DIRECT CONNECTION MAY BE HAD BETWEEN IDAHO AND THIS STATE

Nevada, and especially Elko county, has long looked forward to direct railroad connection with Idaho, says the Elko Independent. At last the Twin Falls Commercial club has taken up the matter of financing the 90 miles from Twin Falls to Cobre and the 100 miles from Ely to Pioche in order to get direct rail connection with Los Angeles. The following on the subject is taken from the Ely Record:

"The people of Twin Falls have devised a plan for a direct railroad connection with Ely, and on to Pioche, where it would connect with the Clark line into Los Angeles.

"The proposed road will be 400 miles shorter than the Oregon Short Line and Clark road by way of Salt Lake. It will bring 1,000,000 acres of fertile land as close to Los Angeles as San Francisco, or within 500 miles.

"The road as planned will start at Pioche, Nev., on a branch line of the Salt Lake, then run 100 miles north to connection with the Guggenheim railroad at Ely, with which a traffic agreement is assured, according to Mr. McKillan. To carry the line into Twin Falls it will be necessary to build 90 miles of track north from the terminus of the Guggenheim railroad at Cobre, Nev."
