THE POPE AND THE PRECEDENT

ACCORDING to an Italian newspaper, the Pope of Rome has broken a precedent by leaving the grounds of the Vatican. It is a period in the world's history when all precedents are broken, some for weal and some for woe. Five million people have been slain during the past year. The beneficence of America has been poured forth. Wounds have been made and have been bound up. Influences are working stronger for good and for evil than ever before. The mere fact that the Pope left the imprisoning walls and visited a church without the Vatican is simply another proof that the influence of the pontiff is being felt and that he may yet be a power, at least an influence in the bringing of the world war to a conclusion.

THE RACE WILL BE TO THE SWIFT

THROUGH the columns of the Bonanza there is being conducted a voting contest that is arousing widespread interest. It is not the usual type of rivalry where an automobile or a store order is the prize, but in this instance the young woman chosen will be the first movie star of Nevada and will be given an opportunity to advance in the art. She will furthermore receive stock to the amount of $1,000.

Inasmuch as there is no expense attached to the undertaking, simply the cutting out of coupons and forwarding them to the company, it is little wonder that the rivalry is keen and that there is no means of ascertaining at this time who will be the successful candidate. The race will be to the swift in this instance and the Bonanza, as well as the Nevada Film company, declares a fair field and no favoritism to any one.

SILVER ON THE UP GRADE

FOR months past the Bonanza has been reiterating the opinion that silver will be placed behind the I. O. U.'s of Europe and that bimetalism will result as a conclusion of the war. The ratio will be established at about 20 or 25 to 1 and then the white metal will have its innings and Tonopah will come into its own. The showing made by the silver market in the past several days is extremely gratifying and the evidences are that the appreciation in price will be steady from now on.

There should be no regrets or apprehensions felt if the market should slip off a quarter of a point now and then, for Tonopah has millions of ounces in storage that are credited as an asset at 50 cents an ounce. This silver must be marketed in order that the money thus tied up may be available for dividends and for development work. The market will soon absorb this silver and after that time the appreciation in price will be rapid. Now is the time to get aboard the Tonopah market and ride it to prosperity. The physical and market conditions are such that the opportunity of today probably will never be repeated.

AN ARMY OF THE UNEMPLOYED

ACCORDING to Director Cooke, of the Department of Public Works, a census of the unemployed which was taken in the spring of the year demonstrated that at that time 75,000 wage earners in Philadelphia were out of employment. This means that the number of men who were willing to work and were unable to get it was as large as the regular army of the United States. There is good reason for thinking that conditions have improved vastly since that time and that we will enter on the coming winter with more hope and confidence. It pays to be optimistic, and the proper spirit is to go steadily forward in the belief that things will eventually right themselves.

But what are we to think of the party and the policies which were mainly responsible for bringing about this distressing state of affairs. It was but natural that the building trades should be dull during the winter months, but aside from this the impartial figures of the director show that the greatest percentage of unemployment was in the textile industries. The workers in the mill districts were the first to feel the disastrous effects of the Democratic Tariff, and they will be the last to recover. This in spite of the silly promises of the Democratic orators that these men would be better off under a low protective tariff.

The war orders have offset the general depression and the stoppage of imports has minimized the effects of the Underwood bill, but we have had a sufficiently impressive object lesson to last for many months.

THE PRESIDENT, HIS DUTY AND HIS SORROW

THE removal of George Burkitt from the assistant postmastership of Winnetka, Illinois, by his superior officer, Postmaster A. M. Kloepfer, was a high handed outrage. All that the young man did was to criticize the President of the United States for arranging to wed again within a year of the demise of the first lady of the land, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, one whom all admired, esteemed and loved.

The people of the nation are behind the assistant postmaster in his criticism. They realize that they have elected a man to office who has had placed on his shoulders a burden more difficult to bear than that imposed upon Lincoln or any other president in the history of the nation. Mr. Wilson is presumed to be in constant touch with the diplomatic conditions abroad, those that are making for war and peace, those that are unthroning kings and changing boundary lines. He has an office such as possesses greater dignity and more onerous burdens than any hitherto conferred upon a human being.

In these trying times Mr. Wilson should not be a baseball enthusiast nor a caterer to cupid. He should devote every atom of his energy to the work on hand. It may result in nervous collapse or physical downfall when the urgency of the time has passed, but if he is a true patriot he will sacrifice himself. It is not a time for him to be courting a widow, with the United States on the verge of two international complications, either of which may lead to war, nor is it of credit to the chief executive that he has so quickly revived from the sorrow of the death of his good wife. The assistant postmaster of Winnetka is cleared of all blame for his criticisms.

There should be a large and representative attendance at the meeting to be held tomorrow evening in H. E. Epstine's office. Let the kiddies have a swell Christmas tree and don't forget the old folk at that. Be there sharp at 8 and start the movement in the right way.

The Progressives are flocking back to the Republican standard and they are bade welcome, as was the prodigal of old, although it would be assurance on their part if they should ask for veal. Pie should be enough for the bakers.

An expert now says that one kiss in a hundred is germ laden. With disease a hundred to one shot we'll take the risk.—Detroit Free Press.

CLIPPED AND CREDITED

Mr. Bryan says he read the President's Manhattan Club speech with sorrow. Thus do we understand why he jumps on it with ghoulish glee.—Pittsburgh Gazette Times.

A magazine writer is trying to tell why the poor man is unhappy. And when he gets through he might explain also why so many rich men seem to have their troubles.—Indianapolis Star.

"Al" Smith, who has been elected Sheriff of New York, declares that he'd rather be a lamppost in Park Row than Governor of California. Why not jubilate without throwing bricks?—Louisville Courier Journal.

A mothers' magazine says a child's cry is music. Yes, and accompanied with the grunts of the nervous neighbors, and the yelps and growls of the dogs, and the pitiful wail of the cat, it resembles some grand opera.—Nashville Tennessean.
